Branstad visits Test Kitchen

FORT MADISON - Current Iowa governor, and newly nominated Ambassador to China, Terry Branstad paid a visit to the Elliott Test Kitchen this morning and saw first-hand how the program is helping improve ACT performance for local students.

Kumar Wickramasingha, the facilities creator and owner, was able to seal the invitation as part of the Governor’s 99-county sweep, with visits in Lee County today.

“Well I was informed that this Elliott Test Kitchen was a great program that was helping kids and helping students in FM and I wanted to see it personally,” Branstad said this morning.

Wickramasingha welcomed the Governor and, after introductions to those in attendance, showed a video presentation of how the test kitchen came to be and how important education is in Wickramasingha’s home country of Sri Lanka. A slide showed an auditorium full of students doing ACT prep and then a following slide of a full testing session at the Test Kitchen.

“I think it’s great. I thought it was pretty interesting that (he) showed the picture of Sri Lanka,” Branstad said.

And they’re doing it in other countries, and in India, education is very important there. “Here we have a great opportunity to see something interesting and unique.” Wickramasingha said it was a wonderful lunch and opportunity.

FORT MADISON - Sometimes in sports a win hinges on catching someone at the right time of the schedule.

Both the girls and boys varsity basketball teams may be looking at that scenario come Friday night at Danville.

The Danville boys, a perennial powerhouse in southeast Iowa basketball under Head Coach Ken Lafoon, typically are an intimidating presence with a long, enviable history. That history is not lost on HTC Coach John Hellige, who said the Crusaders haven’t beaten Danville in 15 games going back six years.

“They beat us 15 games in a row dating back to Jan. 15, 2010 and that was a triple overtime win on homecoming night,” Hellige said.

But the Crusaders may just be catching the Bears at the right time. Fort Madison High School handed the Bears one of their worst, if not the worst defeat in a long time of their worst, if not the worst defeat in a long time Wednesday night at Danville.

While the Bears also boast 68-29 on Tuesday night.

Hellige said.

“Sometimes in sports a win hinges on catching someone at the right time. Fort Madison is a very good team and I may be looking at that win hinges on catching someone at the right time.”

Program helps local senior score 33 on ACT exam

FORT MADISON - The only really true way to see the meaning of something is to try it...or as the old adage goes, the proof is in the pudding.

That’s apropos, especially when you’re talking about Kumar Wickramasingha’s Elliott Test Kitchen, where local students can go after school several nights a week to get additional help studying and preparing for exams, specifically the ACTs.

Jack Marek, a senior at Fort Madison High School recently took advantage of the programming at the Test Kitchen and nailed a 33 on his ACT. Marek said

“I think we’ve been too complacent sometimes here in the U.S. and Iowa because we’ve historically had a very good education system.”

“Now it’s not going to be an easy job by any means because we have some significant differences in policy. So I hope I can be an effective communicator,” Branstad said.

kitchen, but for the students to able to spend time with Iowa’s longest governor. But also for his support. I hope people see this and see what we’re doing here and come and support us,” Wickramasingha said after the event.

Branstad pointed to the obstacles Wickramasingha had to overcome in coming to America and starting a program like this.

“It wasn’t easy and people didn’t initially accept it, but you’ve gained support and you’ve been able to get the word out. When the governor comes that kind of helps, too,” Branstad said.

He indicated since his nomination as Ambassador to China, he hasn’t had the opportunity to speak with Chinese President Xi Jinping, but is hearing some good feedback.

MT. PLEASANT - The Bloodhound wrestling team got a little fight from West Hancock on Thursday night, but got a lot more from Mt. Pleasant as Fort Madison split a three-way wrestling meet in Mt. Pleasant.

The Hounds knocked off West Hancock 48-24 and then fell 28-48 to Mount Pleasant.

Against the Titans, the Hounds recorded pins by Ethan Kruse at 106, Dalton Woolever at 132, Harlan Steffenmeier at 145, and Danen Settles at 195. All matches against the Titans were either won by pin or forfeit. Skylar Schau suffered a pin to Brett Hambel at 126, Jarrett Settles fell to a pin by Oliver Cole at 138, and West Hancock’s Caleb Adams pinned Diego Lazor at the 2:30 mark.

In the Mt. Pleasant matches the Hounds recorded three pins by Nathan and Harlan Steffenmeier at 120 and 145 respectively. Neither of those matches lasted past the :30 mark. Skylar Schau recorded another quick pin for the Hounds at the :36 mark. Ryan Steffenmeier recorded a 2-0 decision over Mt. Pleasant’s Brayden Ackles at 113 and Dalton Woolever had a 11-3 decision at 132.

Those were the only mat wins for the Hounds as the Tigers took 4 wins by forfeit. Kruse was pinned at 3:00 mark at 106, Settles was pinned at 160 at the :55 mark, Lazorano was pinned at the 2:57 mark at 182 and Settles was pinned by Dalton Bass at 195.

he credits about two months worth of test preparation in achieving the high score. The highest score you can get on the national exam is a 36.

“I came down here once a week for about 8 weeks,” Marek said Tuesday as he helped prepare and serve food for Governor Terry Branstad’s visit. Branstad visited for lunch as part of 99-county swing through the state.

“We focus on math, science and reading in different sessions,” Marek said. “Then we get some tips on the best way to take the test and how to maximize our time in each session.”

Several teachers, who were in attendance Tuesday as part of the reception for the Governor, were Brent Zirkel and Andrew Trexel. Both teachers spend time at the kitchen as part of the services to the students. Market said Trexel showed him a practice of keeping his pencil in line with where he was reading to help focus the eye and brain on what was being comprehended.

“Those are some of the things they teach us here.”

The Test Kitchen is also known for some pretty good study snacks. Wickramasingha, who was once the manger of Alphas on the Riverfront, brings his knowledge and skills of cooking to the program as well as helping students who want to learn to make some basic dishes do so and then serves them for the students during the study sessions.

The Test Kitchen is located at 807 Avenue G and can be reached by calling 319-250-9052. You can also visit the website at www.tkef.org.
Both HTC teams on upswing

Crusaders have had high energy practices this week and have a game plan. “We’ve had a couple of really good practices, with a lot of high energy,” Hellige said. “Our kids are focused. This week was a huge breakthrough. The kids have been a little quiet in practice, and this week we got some ideas and perspective. With this group, we haven’t had that up until now. That’s a sign the kids are fully engaged and ready to play. It’s gonna be a fun game.”

The Crusaders are paced by Connor Conrad, who in case you haven’t heard, dropped 40 on Central Lee Tuesday night including 14-to-16 from the free throw line. The 40 was a new HTC school record. Conrad is averaging 20.8 points per game atop the Southeast Iowa Superconference-South. He’s also tops on the team in rebounds at eight per game and assists at 13. Cory Hopper is 3rd in the conference at 18.0, five boards and 12 assists.

The Crusaders also lead the conference in 3-point field goals with 111 on the season.

Hellige said he’s seen some tape of Fort Madison’s win on Tuesday night and the team has to execute a plan because Danville is still a very skilled team. “We feel like we’re ready to make a step forward and compete with top teams in the conference. Really hoping to be ready for that,” he said.

“I think we’ve got a good game plan to hopefully minimize their offense.”

Randolph picking up steam

Head Coach Tony Johnson’s varsity girls squad is coming off a 64-53 loss to Central Lee, but the 4th quarter looked like the Lady Crusaders had found the right gear. Senior Ali Randolph, who’s averaging 8 points per game and 7 boards led HTC with 20 points, her highest offensive production of the season. Taylor Boeding knocked down 14 points and is averaging 13 points per game putting her in the top 10 in the conference.

“We need to take care of the ball and stay focused for 32 minutes, especially at Danville,” Johnson said. “That’s a tough place to win.”

Danville is lead by junior Emma Jarrett who scores at a 9.7 points per game clip and two seniors Kathryn Luers and Lauren Finke both chip in with 7 per game.

HTC has been getting some help inside from sophomore Emily Box. Box is averaging five points per game but is third in the SIEMC South with 9 boards per game.

“We’ve been working hard on our putbacks, rebounds and free throws,” Johnson said.

The Lady Crusaders are 3-4 on the season going into Friday’s game.

Both junior varsity boys and girls teams play starting at 4:45 with the varsity action starting at 6 p.m girls tip off followed by the boys.

Top-shelf customer service should be in all business plans not have the skill set to rectify the problem and keep that sale.

Many...and I mean MANY of you came into contact with me at KFC and it was a rare occasion that I couldn’t rectify any situation. That doesn’t mean there were some customers who’s sole purpose was free food...it happens and continues to I’m sure, but if I even sensed that a customer was leaving the store unhappy I inserted myself into that situation and regularly solved that problem and held onto that customer. Even if I had to chase them into the parking lot to fix the problem. That happened...it did and I kept them as customers.

Very rarely is it that a manager and customer can’t come to a reconciliation point and end a problem with a smile and solution.

So where did it go? Where is that top-shelf customer service that we should be getting at all of our local businesses? Is it training...is it attitude? When I held training sessions for our managers I always said you hire for attitude and train for skill. Customer service skills are marketable, in high demand and the first contact that can literally make or break a business. Some of you hit it out of the park...some have opportunities.

So as you move about our town this week. Pay attention when you are out spending some money and running your errands. Take a second look at the service you’re getting. Is it top-shelf? If it was, make sure you let someone know. Business owners and managers hear the bad stuff. Believe me, they do. But it’s really nice when someone lets them know the good stuff, too. But if it was bad...maybe you let someone know that, too.

Either way shop locally, engage with your customer base and get to know their names and faces, thank them for their business...and read the Pen City Current. But that’s Beside the Point.
