Test Kitchen is undervalued utensil

I’ve spent quite a bit of time down at the Elliott Test Kitchen for different events, and I always find myself drawn to the white boards with math and science questions scripted out for the students that attend sessions there.

Kumar Wickramasinghe’s storefront school and events endeavor is some-thing worth taking a look at. And if you looked at it, you might want to take a second look.

This program is put together with donations and grant money. No child is charged for coming down and studying. Let me say that again, no child is charged for coming down and taking part in study help and ACT prep. And although donations are a welcomed and necessary part of the business, coupled with federal, state and local funding grants, families looking to college for their students give this effort credence.

I just got the bill for my youngest daughter’s first year at the University of Iowa, $22,000...one year. That’s almost static to other universities in the state and really out of state as well. These universities are business first and foremost and don’t ever let anyone tell you anything else. They want people whose academic track record shows a consistent pattern of success.

P.O.R.T. phase 2 easement on council agenda

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG

FORT MADISON - The Fort Madison School district is giving a local group property to extend a current recreational trail on the northwest edge of town.

At Tuesday’s upcoming Fort Madison City Council meeting, the council will vote to approve a purchase for one dollar for an easement that will run along the southern edge of the school district’s current junior high campus.

ename will connect with the Phase 1 easement obtained by the city from DuPont, which runs along the east side of the same property. When completed, Phase 2 will connect with 48th Street according to drawings provided to the city by Poepping, Stone, Bach & Associates of Keokuk. Rachel Benda, chairperson for PORT (Promoting Outdoor Recreational Trails), said this is part of the legal portion of the processes for Phase 2.

“It’s a process that Larry Dricoll (FM Public Works Director) helps us with,” Benda said. “He helps us with getting all the easements and making sure all the i’s are dotted and t’s are crossed. The Phase 2 land is all owned by the school district and the city has to own the property.”

Benda said the same process was handled when DuPont owned the first half of the trail on the east side of the school campus.

The PORT committee was also informed last week that they were awarded a Trees Forever grant through Alliant Energy’s Branching Out program of $10,000 for helping to plant trees along the trail route. The grant is triggered by local in-kind donations to the project typically in the form of labor to plant the trees.

“We just received word that we received a $10,000 Trees Forever grant last week and we informed the committee this week. We hope to partner with the school and identify a teacher or teachers that...”

The FM P.O.R.T. may get another easement Monday night to extend the current recreation-al trail west to 48th Street. The easement is on Tuesday’s City Council agenda as a sale from the school district for $1.

Mobile Food Bank site moved

FORT MADISON - According to George Gaudette, president of the Fort Madison Food Pantry, this month’s Mobile Food Bank will be held in the parking lot at Shopko.

The event, which is typically held on Thursday, Feb. 9 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.

will help us plant those. We have to use some in-kind labor as part of the grant award."

She said the committee, which operates as a sub-committee of the Fort Madison Parks, Recreation and Docks board, has almost everything they need to start on Phase 2. Phase 1 of the project, which connects Bluff Road - just east of the junior high campus - to Ivanhoe park is open and available for recreation enthusiasts. However some lighting for the trail is still being worked on. The committee is looking at using solar lighting for the trail or other energy efficient models.

"It’s been nothing but open arms from the community," Benda said. "We started this project in January of 2014 and had the first phase ready for use by 2016 so that was pretty fast and we're pretty proud of that."

In addition to still working out the lighting, she said bidding will soon begin for fencing along the east side of Phase 1 trail.

Total plans for the trail include Phase 1 which is almost complete; Phase 2 which is in the works and will connect the trail with the Baxter Sports Complex and then a third phase will take the trail west further to Fort Madison Community Hospital.

A quick look at other agenda items for Tuesday’s meeting include:

• second reading (of three) for an ordinance changing the meeting time for City Council meetings from 7 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.
• first reading (of three) to approve amending several chapters of the zoning code to update definitions of commercial vehicles on recommendations from the Planning and Zoning Committee.
• resolution authorizing accepting Phase 1 work on the Wastewater Treatment Plant raw pump station as complete.

Increased test scores help save families money on college tuition and achievement. Those people stay four years and those people PAY for four years. I've been raving about the costs of college for years now. And I think when you look at the efforts of our state's community colleges to stay very affordable and offer alternatives to degrees, as well as state school districts looking at building regional education centers to offer some of the same academic and vocational programming at very reduced, if not free, tuition. You'll see that the landscape is changing.

The state can't balance its budget so it pulls back on the state can't balance its budget so it pulls back on taxpayers contributions. Oh...and if you're really athletic, they'll pay for everything.

But there's the rub, most of our students locally don't fit that model of the Big Ten scholarship athlete. And this is not a knock on them. Parents spend a lot of money helping their kids follow their dreams of playing hoops or softball or what have you. But that's a crap shoot at best. You might get there, but honestly you probably won't. Maybe you do to another level, DIII or community college sports and they pay for your school. That's wonderful, you've worked hard and you've earned it. But for parents who don't have the lineage and successful student athletes in the family, there is a way for your student who works hard at their studies to get some of that money.

Most colleges now use the ACT as a barometer coupled with your grade-point average. Our daughter qualified for an Old Gold scholarship at the University. She also was accepted into an honors program that also kicked in some money. All in all she'll get about $9,000 per year paid by the university her first year. The Old Gold is renewable every year as long as she stays in good standing and keeps a 3.3 GPA on campus.

But that money is not competitive with the other students. It's guaranteed. Every year...every student. The Old Gold is guaranteed if you have a 30 or 31 on your ACT and your student holds a 3.8 GPA. If your student accomplishes that, their college bill just dropped by $35,000. Now I don't believe that a college education should cost much more than that. I believe we all should have some skin in this, but it shouldn't be as hard as it is now. The health care industry is taking our savings. The FAFSA must be reinvented as it does not include any credits resulting from the increased costs of the Affordable Care Act. It gives little to no value for two or more students in college at the same time. It's out of date.

But Wickramasingha, brings people in to help your child prepare for the ACT. At a minimum sit down with your student and formulate a plan. If they have a GPA over 3.0, it is worth it, believe me, it is worth it, to get them some ACT prep. Outside of the Test Kitchen you will likely pay for that prep on your own via online or at another facility. There is a lot of money to be had in that test. And by the way parents, if you don't know this already, the government has changed the game with student loans. You can get a private loan to fund education through your bank but it's not an education loan, it's a private loan. Any student loans now go through Sallie Mae and Navient. Politicians and advocates have been screaming about the high cost of college, but universities and the government will only give your child about 20% of the net out-of-pocket cost of college to the students. If you don't have about $15K to $20K per year set aside for each student you put in college, you...as a parent, are going to have to borrow 80% of what you don't have. The government very rarely says no, because they make 6% to 8.5% on that money, that's high enough to make up for default. Take your student down to the Test Kitchen, he'll even feed 'em and teach them to make some food. Your credit report will be glad you did.

Hounds roll Washington 70-53

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG  PCC EDITOR

WASHINGTON - Pushing team basketball seems to be working well for Fort Madison Head Coach Ryan Wilson.

The Hounds dropped Washington 70-53 on Tuesday night and had three boys in double figures, after last week’s win over Central Lee where four players had double figures.

Kaleb Cresswell led the Hounds with 28 including six 3-pointers, five in the second half. Seniors Trevor Kokjohn had 13 and CJ Richardson chipped in with 10 points.

“We’re kind of sluggish in the first quarter,” Wilson said. “But once we got going things started falling and we were moving the ball well.”

The Hounds had a three-point lead heading into the 2nd quarter and then went on a 9-3 run through the third minute and pushed the lead to a 27-19 halftime lead.

By the end of the third period the Hounds had built a 54-30 lead and never looked back.

Wilson said aside from Cresswell’s hot shooting, the Hounds got another good outing from Kokjohn and Richardson.

“CJ did a great job pushing the ball on transition and I think Trevor was really close to another triple double,” Wilson said. “It seems to be that they’re sharing the ball and spreading things around well right now. We need team basketball and those things seem to be helping.”

Wilson said the team got into a little foul trouble early with three starters having two fouls each in the first half.

He said he also got good production from brothers Shance and Shemouyr Redd-Donald, who came off the bench to give the starters some time.

“Shemouyr got on a bit of a run in the third quarter. He got a chance to see his first real action and played well,” Wilson said. “We’re getting everyone involved.”

Logan Rashid scored seven for the Hounds followed by Shance Redd-Donald and Lorenzo Riles each who had four points. Austin Rose and Alex Gully each added a bucket for Fort Madison, who travels to the Quincy KHQA Shootout on Saturday to face Pittsford.

“They’re a really good well-rounded team. We’re going to have our hands full with them,” Wilson said.

HTC girls get sweep of New London

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG  PCC EDITOR

NEW LONDON - The Holy Trinity girls did just enough to stay ahead of New London Friday night and pull out a win.

The Tigers pulled the game even with about two minutes left at 35, but the Crusaders were able to hang on for a 39-37 win in Southeast Iowa Superconference South action in New London.

The win pulls Holy Trinity even on the year at 10-10, New London falls to 9-10 with both teams finishing up the regular season with the SEISC Shootout today in Danville.

The Crusaders got a little handise in the fourth quarter sending New London to the free-throw line eight times. Senior Madsyn Wals made six free throws in the final period. She led all scorers with 17 points.

Senior Ali Randolph led the Crusaders with 13 points including four in a 6-point 4th quarter that allowed New London back into the game.

“We played pretty vanilla,” Head Coach Tony Johnson said. “The girls did enough to get the win and we see (New London) again next week in the first round of regions.”

The first quarter looked like Johnson was going to get a balanced scoring effort as Brett Schneider and Emily Box each had four points and Mya Lawlor added a bucket.

Senior Ali Randolph, who sits at 5th place in the conference at 12.0 points per game, didn’t get on the board until the 2nd quarter, when she scored six of the Crusaders 10 points to give HTC a slim 20-18 lead at halftime.

Taylor Boeding started the third quarter with a 3-pointer to push the lead to five but then HTC was held scoreless for almost six minutes while New London chipped away at the lead. The Tigers took their one and only lead at the three minute mark 25-23 on a three-point play by freshman Alex Wenger. Boeding answered with another 3-pointer and the Crusaders were back on top 26-25. HTC got two more buckets and a free throw in the last minute of the period for a 33-27 score going into the final period.

The Tigers then started getting frequent trips to the free-throw line where they converted all seven of their attempts in the period and actually had the game tied at 35 at the one-minute mark. But Randolph made back-to-back free throws to help put the game away.

Other scorers for Holy Trinity included Schneider with 8, Emily Box and Boeding had 6 each, Savannah Hoenig had 3, Mya Lawlor scored two and Madison Motherfeld had one. Box and Schneider each had 8 boards for the Crusaders. Box is currently 2nd in the conference with 9 per game.
