FORT MADISON - What started as a way to give area residents a look inside a shuttered old prison, has become an event that is drawing regional attention and has planners overwhelmed with inquiries.

On Sunday from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Iowa State Penitentiary officials and volunteers will give people 30 to 35 minute tours of the oldest maximum security prison west of the Mississippi, but according to local economic officials, the event may be bigger than anyone expected and now prison staff is estimating thousands of people may descend on Fort Madison to take advantage of the tours.

ISP officials are requesting all attendees bring a non-perishable food item to donate to the local food pantry. Food pantry officials will also be on hand for cash donations.

“Organizers of the ISP tour event are excited to bring this event to this community,” said ISP spokeswoman Rebecca Bowker. “Please be aware long wait times are to be expected and people are encouraged to car pool to account for limited parking.”

Local media was used to invite people out to the prison, but people from all over the Midwest have heard about the tours over social media and have turned an eye to Fort Madison.

The Iowa State Penitentiary will be hosting tours of the old prison in Fort Madison from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sunday. A non-perishable food item is requested for entry.

Schiller’s impact growing in Nepal

DONNELSSON: He stops just short of calling it a pilgrimage, but he’s quickly realizing that’s the course it’s taking.

A former science teacher at Central Lee, Ernie Schiller, who’s reach as an educator spans most of southeast Iowa, is just four weeks away from taking his third educational trek to Nepal in a volunteer capacity. He’s also helping set up a foundation to help offset the cost of educating and raising children in the mountainous region off the northeast shoulder of India.

Schiller leaves on May 29 with about half an 18-person contingency including 11 from Lee County, but also people who will be joining from the Des Moines area, and other countries around the world. His quest this year is to raise $25,000 to take to villages where he stays to help pay the $250 yearly cost of sending one child to school and to provide funds for disaster relief from the last major earthquake to hit the area in April 2015.

But Schiller said he never had thought of the trips as pilgrimages or missions. “I spoke at our church on Sunday,” Schiller said. “My minister in Donnellson and I had this dialogue and he says, ‘Ok, this ministry you’re on...’ and I’ve never ever thought of it that way. I thought WHOA I never thought about it like a pilgrimage, ministry and mission. and he says back to me, ‘Well Ernie, that’s exactly what you are doing.’

But then I started thinking people on a mis-

The reception kicks off the Main Street Quilt Walk, which occurs May 13th-21st in downtown Ave G businesses. All this action right across from Faeth’s Main Street BBQ on that day as well! Just down the block The Artisans Next Door offers a stamp carving and block printing workshop. Then from 4:30-6:30pm “Colorful Souls: Stained Glass Care” at Dawgs & Drivas. Make it Ft. Hashtags help state track interest in facility

Maggie Guzman, administrative assistant at Fort Madison Partners, said people have been calling several times a day looking for accommodations and information about the city.

“Fort Madison Partners has been receiving several phone calls a day this week from individuals in the tri-state area who are extremely excited about the opportunity to go into the prison this Sunday,” she said.

“We have provided hotel, business, and restaurant information to each of these callers and promoting activities that they can partake in while visiting Fort Madison. This is a great opportunity for our businesses, hotels, and restaurants to welcome visitors from different towns who will be staying the night, or even just a couple of hours,” Jean Peiton, tourism coordinator for the City of Fort Madison has been monitoring social media sites for interest in the prison tour and wants to “commandeer” the Iowa Economic Development Authority’s hashtag #ThisIsIowa.

Peiton says using the social media tags will show the state the high level of interest in the prison.

“The sheer number of people that have responded is a little intimidating. But what a good ‘problem’ to have. Too many people coming to Fort Madison. In all actuality, I think it is a wonderful thing. This is a wonderful thing. This is Iowa State Penitentiary and allows local tracking of posts, pictures, numbers, etc. to use at future planning sessions for repurposing the facility.

"The use of the social media hash tags is to make sure that those who are engaged with the prison through the non-profit's Facebook page, connect to the IEDA office and show the widespread interest in the prison."

Jean Peiton, FM Tourism office regional, and potentially national, interest in preserving the prison.

“The use of the social media hash tags is to make sure that those who are engaged with the prison through the non-prof’s Facebook page, connect to the IEDA office and show the widespread interest in the prison. They have a specific hash tag #ThisIsIowa that they use to track and promote tourism,” she said.

“If we in effect ‘commandeer’ their hash tag and use it, they will see the amount of traffic and interest there is. The original press release that DOC produced has generated over 70,000 engagements. This is what they call ‘organic’ engagements in the social media world. There was some boosting of posts but the paid ads only resulted in a little over 2,000 click-throughs. The event post has had over 1,000 people who have said they are coming and over 3,000 who said that they ‘maybe’ they would come. If all the visitors and even those who can’t make it also use the hashtag, it will show the state just how interested the public is.”

Peiton said visitors should also tag #HISP, which represents Historic Iowa State Penitentiary and allows local tracking of posts, pictures, numbers, etc. to use at future planning sessions for repurposing the facility.

“"The use of the social media hash tags is to make sure that those who are engaged with the prison through the non-prof’s Facebook page, connect to the IEDA office and show the widespread interest in the prison. Nepal visits helping in America, too dedicate their life to it, but I've done that in Lee county. When I spoke at Embury church the same thing came up, I guess the more I think about it it's probably exactly what I'm doing."

"The efforts aren't just having an impact on the people in the villages of Nepal, but also a "pay-it-forward" mentality is growing for the effort in America."

"I can tell you this. What I'm doing seems to be affecting people here. I had a guy who said we have touched his life. People who have money, made money and now they are paying it forward. I never thought about what I'm doing as changing lives here in America as well."

He speaks of a gentle- man he met from Bhutan who is moving into Nepal to help keep the work going.

"This guy from Bhutan, he's 39 with two kids and no wife. He's going to relocate, he's moving next week, back to Nepal, through our interaction over the Internet and he's going to dedicate his life to these people to rebuild after the earthquake. We're going to spend a month together and try to figure this out and then set up a permanent foundation to join this little thing that Ernie Schiller is trying to set up."

Next Friday Schiller will be speaking to the Holy Trinity elementary students and challenging them to create a small care package to take to another child in Nepal with a handwritten note, a small token or possession that speaks to the local cul- ture, and possibly a small donation.

"I'm going to challenge them to write a handwritten note or computer generated note to a kid in Nepal. Maybe a card or little letter stating who they are, where they're from and their age and put in a few prized possessions and small donation and get it to me by the 25th of May."

Schiller said he will be flying over with the first contingency on the 29th and then on June 12th other contingency will leave with the group flying back on the 27th of June.

"I thought when I went last fall this would be a one-time deal. Not knowing that what I'm doing people are wanting to pay it forward and I'm kind of enamored with that. I wasn't going to go back but with so many people wanting to go, it's a pretty darned good place to visit."

He's quick to say that the Nepalese people live like the westernized world lived 150 years ago, but some of the things they do are beyond the primitive lifestyle. Schiller said there are no guns allowed in the country and the only place he's ever seen them is at the airport or on the police. And the way they solve arguments is usually some very loud talking.

"The concern for the environment and the eco- system is a culturally high priority. And he had one situation he would never have in Donnellson."

"I was walking to school one day and four or five kids were walking with me. It's a 45-minute walk around curves and up the hills. All of sudden one of the kids got really freaked out and he was a kind that didn't speak a lot of English. He came really close to me and then all came close to me and we continued our walk to school in a big huddle." When I got home I was talking with a translator about it and he said "Oh, yes...what they heard was a Siberian Tiger that had been in the area that was looking for a cat or a goat. But I feel so safe there, I never saw a snake or spider. I did see a mos-quito though, you worry more about the bugs and carrying disease."

The topic of conver- sation on most days... politics. The children and adults alike want to know about American politics.

"The last time I went it was fall and during elec- tion season and that's all they wanted to talk about," he said. "They are not active in their own politics and they would want to talk about all this politics."

"That caught me off guard."

"The Nepalese live off three crop seasons, rice, potatoes, and corn or barley. Schiller said they eat what they grow and grow what they eat. They don't have grocery stores, but they do have markets, but their diet is comprised solely of what can be raised on the land."

"When they grow crops they have these terraced hills and they don't lose an ounce of top soil. No erosion takes place. You're living like our people did 150 years ago yet you're so ecologically sound that you don't lose an ounce."

"The earthquakes, which they have about every 75 years, damages the fields but they immediately go to rebuild them."

He said they are start- ing to use more durable materials with the adobe, including mesh and con- crete for foundations on the homes to help struc- turally.

Hounds down MP in last dual meet

Conference meet Monday at Fairfield; Mayors 11

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG

FORT MADISON - The FMHS boys tennis team enjoys playing at home...and doubles seems to be their game of choice.

The Bloodhounds downed Mt. Pleasant 5-4 in boys tennis action Friday night in Fort Madison, but trailed 2-4 going into doubles play and needed to win them all to eek out the win.

Dane Seanye and Johnny Hernandez found them- selves in a tough battle at No. 1 doubles with Mount Pleasant's Nos. 1 and 2 seeds Ben Zihlman and Ethan Weber. The Fort Madison pair dropped the first set 4-6 but came back to win in the second set 7-6 in a 7-3 set tiebreaker, which forced a first-to-10 by two tie- breaker game and the Hounds came out on top 10-7.

At No. 2 doubles the Hounds Sam Avery and Austin Krueger made it a bit easier winning 6-2, 6-1 over the Panthers' Joey Holtkamp and Elijah Pooster. Avery downed Holtkamp in singles action 6-2, 6-2 at No. 3 and Krueger handled Pooster at No. 4 singles 6-2, 6-1.

At the No. 3 doubles, head coach Dean Hogan slipped Tim Shin into the match, who hadn't played singles, to team up with Conrad Hellman to face off against the Panthers Corbin Broeker and Jaxon Hoyle. Hoyle also didn't see singles action. The move paid off for the Hounds as they won the match 6-3, 6-4 to help seal the deal.

In singles Seany fell to Zihlman 4-6, 6-7 (5-7 tie- breaker) at No. 1, and Hernandez lost to Weber 4-6, 6-0. With Avery and Krueger winning their singles matches, Hellman fell in a tough match 6-7 (7-5 set tiebreaker), 7-5, 7-10 match tiebreaker. Blake Feuerhammer played at No. 6 singles and lost to Nick Sandeen 6-7 (4-7 set tiebreaker), 2-6.

“This was our last dual meet and our seniors had a great showing in the all the matches they played tonight,” Hogan said. “They were really great tennis matches for anyone to watch.”
