Councilman wants review of Civil Service board

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG

FORT MADISON - A Fort Madison City Councilman, who's supportive of term-limits, wants a review of the Civil Service Commission terms and scope.

First ward City Councilman Chris Greenwald balked at approving a renewal of Duane Denning to a 6-year appointment to the commission. The agenda item was part of the consent agenda, which includes groups of regular items including paying bills, approving previous minutes, etc., that typically don't require a debate at the meetings.

“=> I know Mr. Denning was on here when I started at least 10 years ago,” Greenwald said. “Whereas I do appreciate that service, I recently have come to concerns with it. The last year and a half to two years have been tough. And I think it would have been easier if we had a spirit of cooperation between us and the civil service board. But I don't feel we had that.”

Councilman Rusty Andrews asked Greenwald what issue he was specifically referring to. Greenwald said he was speaking specifically to an issue where the board had voted to be in support of an item and then was lobbied by the members of the Fort Madison Police Department and had a special meeting

Holmes, DuPont sponsor last concert of the season

BY PCC STAFF
FORT MADISON - This Sunday the Ft. Madison City Band will once again be performing in Central Park at 7:30 pm, but starting at 6:45 pm the Navajo Bagpipe Band will be performing.

This week's concert, sponsored by Charles W. Homes and the DuPont Corporation, will be featuring: River of Life; Where the Black Hawk Soars; The Dragon Prince; Legacy; Light Cavalry Overture; El Festivo; Nine to Five; Old Tent Meeting; and more.

Bring a picnic, a lawn chair or enjoy the concert from one of the provided benches at 7:30 pm; let the kids enjoy the playground while listening to the City Band.

This week's concert will be the final concert of the City Band's 87th summer season.

More road improvements

City street crews have posted signs in anticipation of additional closures for the 27th Street and Avenue L Intersection reconstruction. Work has already begun on the south side of the intersection at the Hy-Vee entrance. Soon traffic will be cut to one lane each way.

FCC chair trying to throttle Internet

The Trump Administration and proponents of putting net neutrality on different legal footing - words used by attorneys for Verizon in an editorial of HBO's "Last Week Tonight with John Oliver," are trying to put a "governor" or throttle on what comes to you on your devices when you access the Internet. The end games seems to be for them to be able to market their products more effectively than smaller company, eliminating a level playing field in a very competitive market.

Most company's are looking at as anti-competitive, which it is. But I don't care too much about that. After all my company is totally dependent on our readers being able to access www.penCitycurrent.com, just as easily as they can www.thetimelake.com or www.dailyvrem.com.

Could those groups possibly have to access to our site slowed down? Theoretically yes. Not very probable, but if their parent company's have the gumption and connections, it could happen. And they could do it

OPINION

Holding current Internet rules keeps playing field level

The anti-competitive nature of President Trump's FCC is leading the charge at the direction of Ajit Pai, the chairman of the FCC, and former Verizon attorney, for you to see first. A cellular could do the same thing. You would literally be seeing what they chose to do the same anyway we choose. But now a big corporation comes in and requires more of the river than it can contain. We can fish it, we can boat it, we can clean it and improve it...we can even contain it. But now a big corporation comes in and requires more of the river than it can contain. We can fish it, we can boat it, we can clean it and improve it...we can even contain it. But now a big corporation comes in and requires more of the river than it can contain.

According to a website run by FreePress Action Fund, the FCC incorporated stronger net neutrality guidelines during the Obama presidency company's such as AT&T, Verizon and Sprint were all caught violating net neutrality guidelines, but they were just that - guidelines. Verizon sued in court and the courts said FCC needed to tighten up the rules, which they did.

According to a website run by FreePress Action Fund www.freepress.net/story/2017/04/comcast-net-neutrality-violations-brief-history - "From 2011–2013, AT&T, Sprint and Verizon blocked Google Wallet, a mobile-payment system that competed with a similar service called Isis, which all three companies blocked peer-to-peer file-sharing applications without disclosing this fact to its customers."

We sent letters supporting net neutrality to the offices of U.S. Sen. Charles Grassley and U.S. Rep. Dave Loebsack. "As a member of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, which has jurisdiction over telecommunications policy, I will continue to closely monitor any FCC rulemaking related to net neutrality, and will keep your thoughts in mind when considering any legislation related to this important issue. My primary goal is to ensure that constituents in my district have continued open access to internet content while also fostering an environment that allows our rural service providers the ability to compete and grow in an ever changing telecommunications landscape," Loebsack wrote in his reply.

By clicking on the following link http://act.freepress.net/sign/internet_an_trump?source=conf&aktmid=tm595487.000000002 you can register your comments with the FCC about keeping Internet access fully open.

Seriously, anything else is giving this company's a knob to control the speed of information to your phone, computer or cable. They will tell you what you get and when you get it. This is no small change. It can be compared to an invasion of privacy by limiting where you shop, how you book a flight or hotel and, yeah, what news outlets you read.

Each other as well. On a larger scale, a company like Verizon could limit a competing company's app from getting access through its customers Verizon devices. U.S. Cellular could do the same thing. You would literally be seeing what they chose to do for you to see first. A cellular could do the same thing. You would literally be seeing what they chose to do.
Councilman wants board term limits

and reversed that position. Greenwald said it was a decision to spend money to use a consultant to find a new police chief. Mayor Brad Randolph said the commission was in favor of hiring a consultant and then reversed their position and recommended using in-house resources.

"I think if you search your memory, you will find you were lobbied," Greenwald told Andrews.

"Actually then, they also lobbied Council members on that and I guess I don't think that's the function of the Civil Service board and at that time they really gave me the impression of being anti-city. Whereas I think their function is to be neutral and serve as a bridge between the city and public safety."

Greenwald said he was not in favor of renewing Denning's appointment. Randolph asked if the boards are dictated by higher governance. Varley said the city code and section 400 of the Iowa Code dictates the function of the Civil Service Commission.

Randolph asked Varley to look into something that would outline the roles and expectations of volunteers who sit on recommending boards and commissions.

"I think that's a good idea and we can do something like that for those boards," Varley said.

Title 2, Chapter 11, Paragraph 2 of the Fort Madison City Code indicates Fort Madison Civil Service Commission terms are six years. Section 400 of the Iowa Code dictates the terms are for four years.

Greenwald said he's in favor of term limits and wasn't going to run for his years. Iowa Code shows the terms are for four years. Section 400 of the Fort Madison Civil Service Commission indicates the Fort Madison City Code indicates the terms are for four years. "I was talked into this last term and I'm a term limits person. The Civil Service board is one of those, that when it is needed it's serious...it's big stuff!" Greenwald said. "It's almost like they're supreme court justices and they end up being on there for life. We should turn it over every once in a while. We should strive to do that. You know, 10 years is too long. I'm a term limits guy because you get too comfortable. You become overbearing and I think that's perhaps what's happened to this board. I'm very uncomfortable that they were led by the police department!"

Councilman Chad Cangas asked if it was specifically Mr. Denning or the commission in general that Greenwald had a problem with.

"I think it's the commission in general, but Denning was highly involved in that decision. Greenwald said. This side of my brain says God bless the guy for all the time he's put in, and part of my brain says I don't appreciate it because we need to try and keep it fresher. This is painful."

The council moved to table the issue and remove the appointment from the consent agenda, which Greenwald opposed, but it passed 4-1. Councilmen Kevin Rink and Travis Seidel were absent from the meeting.

In other action, the council:

• approved 5-0 to authorize a loan agreement in an amount not to exceed $2.7 million for the Blackhawk sewer construction.
• approved, 5-0, an agreement with the Iowa Dept. of Transportation to use TAP Funds for the Rodeo Park Trail Rehabilitation.
• approved 5-0 to purchase property at 1801-1805 Avenue L for $18,000. Varley said the property will be needed when the Hwy 61 reconstruction gets underway.

Holy Trinity Catholic Schools is pleased to announce that beginning with the 2017-2018 school year, $1,000 grants will be available to incoming students transferring from another school. These are one-time grants, which will be awarded to students for the first year that they attend HTC. A new student discount is already built into HTC's kindergarten tuition costs so these grants do not apply to them.

There are a limited number of spots available in each grade for next year so acceptance will be based on a first come first served basis.

The New Student Grant is a stackable award that can be used in conjunction with all other forms of tuition assistance including STO Grants, Foundation Grants and scholarships.
