Harvestville honors Rodeo with maze

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

DONNELLSON - With fall creeping in around the corner, Harvestville Farms is gearing up for the season highlighted by a new corn maze promoting the Tri-State Rodeo.

Adam, Julie, and Kathy Hohl, owners of the Harvestville Farms just east of Donnellson on Hwy 2, have a cornucopia of events laid out for visitors to the farm and the usual corn maze is back for daylight or nighttime pathfinding.

The Holhs, who try to feature some local business or service group with their maze design each year, reached out to Tri-State Rodeo Chairman Josh Denning to talk about the possibility of incorporating the Tri-State Rodeo theme into the maze this year.

“We’ve been doing mazes for about 13 years now,” Julie Hohl said. “For the last 10 years we’ve been using a maze company out of Utah to help us design our maze. We haven’t done it every single year, but most years, and when we do we try to partner with another local business or service.”

In past years, the maze design has featured organizations like Beck’s Hybrids out of Mt. Pleasant or the Alzheimer’s group or some hand-made sketches.

This year and Adam said a person going through for the first time might take 30 to 40 minutes. However, the couple is offering flashlight mazes at Satur- day and Adam said that might take a little bit longer to get through.

The relationship with the Tri-State Rodeo came about pretty easily. This year we were kicking around ideas and we love the Rodeo. This works out really well because the Rodeo happens about the same time as the corn maze.

For the first three years, the Hohls, who try to incorporate the Tri-State Rodeo theme into the design have been doing mazes out of Utah to help us design our maze. In past years, the maze design has featured organizations like Beck’s Hybrids out of Mt. Pleasant or the Alzheimer’s group or some hand-made sketches.

How sweet

Jaxson Merta, 3, of Cedar Rapids works on an ear of corn on Wednesday afternoon with his grandmother Doris Boeding of West Point at the Shuckfest behind Merschman Seeds. More than 12 tons of corn was shucked. The Sweet Corn festival starts tonight.
