It’s Wright, Morawitz - Round 2

Incumbent Wright says city infrastructure a priority

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON - 2nd Ward City Councilman Brian Wright will be seeking another four years on the City Council in the upcoming November elections. With the election less than seven weeks away, Wright says he wants to continue his work on the council and see that infrastructure and services to the people of Fort Madison and his ward remain a high priority.

Wright was originally appointed to the council in 2011 and then won a special election for the seat and was re-elected in 2013 to his first full term. He opposed Bob Morawitz in 2013 and will oppose Morawitz again in this election.

Wright said his family has a rich tradition of serving the community and he wants to continue that legacy that was instilled in him by his parents. Brian’s brother John served several stints as Fort Madison’s mayor.

“My mom and dad always taught me about service to the community,” Wright said. “The council and myself have moved the town forward and we’ve got lots of stuff done in the Second Ward including 15th Street, Avenue F on 13th and 14th streets and other infrastructure improvements throughout the city. I want to continue on this council because it puts the city and citizens first above everything else.”

One of the issue the six-year councilman wants to work on improving is the communication between the city and its citizens. He said at times Fort Madison residents are divided from the city and its citizens.

Morawitz, questions city’s direction on several issues

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG

FORT MADISON - Robert Morawitz ran for 2nd Ward city councilman in 2013...against Brian Wright. Morawitz is throwing his hat in the ring again in 2017...against Brian Wright.

Morawitz has also run unsuccessfully for state senator in Iowa, but said he heard when he was campaigning that people wanted him to run for City Council instead.

A former member of the U.S. Navy, Morawitz moved to Fort Madison about 31 years ago and says he plans to stay here for quite a while. One of the biggest reason he’s running is that he’s concerned with the direction of the council and the city.

He said one of his biggest concerns is the Fwy 61 project that is currently underway.

“I don’t know what the schedule is for that but they started in the wrong place. I think they should have started between 2nd and 6th streets. They have $14 million and I don’t think that’s going to be enough to do all the things they want to do and the most expensive is between 2nd and 6th,” Morawitz said.

Morawitz said they would have the sewer separation and costs associated with the Old Fort and the historical significance of that area of the highway will result in higher costs and those improvements should have been done first and then move down the highway with the money that’s left over.

In contrast to his opponent, Morawitz is in favor of moving the depot back down the highway with the money that’s left over.

Lee County Auditor to hold voter registration booth on Tuesday

Office to have staff at Fareway from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m.

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON - Tuesday, Sept. 26 is National Voter Registration Day and the Lee County Auditor’s office is taking advantage of the opportunity to engage voters and address questions with new voter ID laws.

Nikki Sugars, the elections administrator in the auditor’s office, said the staff will be at Hy-Vee in Keokuk from 10 to 11 a.m. on Tuesday and will also be at Fareway in Fort Madison from 2 to 3 p.m.

“We think it’s just helpful to the voters to have it out there someplace where voters are,” Sugars said.

Lee County has an overall population according to the last census of 35,862 of which 23,383 are registered to vote. But Sugars said the population numbers include children under the age of 17 1/2 so she didn’t know what percentage of actual eligible voters in Lee County are registered.

Sugars said the booths will also give voters a chance to ask any questions or get information on new voter ID laws recently enacted.

“We’re also using it as an educational time to let voters in on the changes coming with the new voter ID laws,” Sugars said.

State voter ID cards will be sent out at year’s end people know of the new voter ID laws,” she said. “If you don’t have a valid driver’s license or valid state ID card in the DOT’s system by December you will be issued a state voter ID card in the mail sometime after they check everything against their database.

Voters won’t technically have to provide an identification at election sites until January of 2019. Sugars said the new law was probably a result of a crackdown on voter fraud. “We haven’t really heard of any voter id fraud rampant around here, but they are hearing of it in the bigger metro areas.”

Hounds spikers 6-0

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON - The Fort Madison Bloodhounds took about half a set to get things going in the right direction Thursday night in girls high school volleyball action.

“The Hounds have played seven matches in four days, but settled in for a 25-14, 25-4, 25-18 win over visiting Keokuk.

The first set had the Hounds tied with the Chiefs at 14 after going back and forth on points for about five points, but then Amber Dilsaver went on a 10-0 run from the service line and put the game away.

“Our servers did a nice job by taking Keokuk out of system and getting 19 aces. Leigh (Johnson) and Amber got in rhythm and our offense got going,” said head coach Kent Bailey.

Dilsaver finished 16-of-17 serving on the night with six aces to lead the Hounds. Leigh Johnson was the assist leader again for Fort Madison with 31 in the three sets. Josie Pumprehy had 13 digs for FMHS and went 14-of-17 serving with five aces. Kamryn Bailey had 10 digs and served 9-of-10 with two aces. Dilsaver had 17 kills on the night, Courtney Woodley had six kills, and McKenna Fehseke had five to lead the ladies at the net.

“It took a game to get our legs underneath us tonight,” Bailey said. “We’ve had a good week of volleyball, but have some kids nursing some soreness and illness. It’s nice to know we can go out and win games when we aren’t at our best. Give Keokuk credit for digging up a number of tough hits tonight.”

The Hounds are now 16-4 overall and are still unbeaten in the Southeast Conference at 6-0. They will play host again on Tuesday night to Iowa City Liberty.

Burlington shuts out FM 8th graders

BY PCC STAFF

BURLINGTON - A combined middle school football program in Burlington handed Fort Madison's 8th grade program it's first loss Tuesday night 34-0.

Head Coach Ryan Smith said the FMMS found it tough getting things going offensively, but the game gave the 8th graders a chance to see where they were at for the year.

Landes Williams led the crimson and black in rushing with eight carries for 42 yards. Jakob McGowan carried eight times for 40 years. Tate Johnson rushed five times for seven yards.

Williams also had three completions for five yards and an interception. Johnson and Williams had four and five tackles respectively. Johnson also has a fumble recovery.

“It was a great opportunity to see where we are at as a team, and we will definitely grow from this experience,” Smith said.

The 7th grade team tied Burlington 6-6. FMMS plays on Tuesday at home against Ottumwa at 4:30.

Morawitz says city struggling to promote itself

As far as what he'd like to see improved, Morawitz said he'd like to see the downtown area spruced up for businesses and residents in that area, but those improvements are very expensive.

"At one time the city had talked about redosing Avenue G and installing new curbs and sidewalks. It would be very expensive. The businesses don't want to pay for it. I don't like when they redo a street and I have to pay for it. Things need to get done downtown. They talked about putting brick back in, not old bricks but a newer brick and that would be an asset to the town to bring the old feel back to it with the older buildings we have."

He said when he tells people he's from Fort Madison he's heard them say, 'Oh...that's the town with the old Victorian homes and the brick streets.'

Morawitz is a former chairman of the Historic Preservation Commission and was integral in bringing the city's Park to Park district onto the National Register of Historic Places. He also helped design and purchase the brown historic street signs that are now present in the district.

He said the river is another feature of the city that isn't being utilized to its fullest potential.

"I'm a bit upset that the city has not done anything with the restaurant. They say it's in a flood zone but it's always been in a flood zone. They've had offers to renovate it but the city hasn't moved on that yet. They did some work on the docks and they're constantly dredging to keep the marina open. At one point there was a plan to extend the break water further into the river to prevent some of the silting. That's probably very expensive and probably why that hasn't been done. But we have a beautiful view of the river and we need to promote it."

He said the rumors of the Viking Cruise lines are still out there and he thinks that would be a good addition to the city and riverfront.

"Last I heard they were still trying to get approvals for boats to be built - I don't know where that ended up," he said. "I would love to have them here but we need to work on the riverfront."

As far as what he'd like to see improved, Morawitz said he would most likely limit his term to two if he won as he thinks younger people need to be more involved in the future of the city, but he thinks term limits ultimately should be left up to the voters.

"I think that should be decided at the polls, but I pretty much decided I would like to do just two terms if I get in. I think some younger people should get involved. The thing is it's hard getting people to run," Morawitz said. "I think there's things I'd like to get done and I think it would take more than 4 years. I think Councilman Chris Greenwald was going to do two terms also, but since no one ran he stayed in. I'm hoping more people get involved."
Wright say cruise line could be better investment than depot

get either misinformation or a lack of information from the city. He said social media can be a platform of incorrect information and the city needs to do a better job at making sure citizens have correct information.
He said people get upset with the city about certain projects or directions city officials are going but the people don't have all the information they need to understand why things are done the way they are.
Wright pointed to the parks and street work that's being done.
"One thing that has come about is the parks and people believe we are letting the parks go because we don't have the prison labor anymore, but that's not true. Our parks are in great shape because of some hires we've made," he did.
"And streets, people don't understand why we are doing them the way we are and 27th street is a great example. That money came from IDOT and it can only be used for that because it's Hwy. 61. We are also under some EPA mandates on storm sewer and sanitary sewer separation so a lot of things have to be done according to those guidelines and people just don't understand that because they don't have that information."
Other hotly debated issues have been in front of the city council in the past weeks and months. One of which is relocating the depot, an issue that may not be decided until election time depending on the progression of negotiations between the city and Amtrak.
Wright said he's heard both sides of the issue of moving the depot to its former location on the riverfront near downtown Fort Madison and said right now he's on the side of leaving it where it is.
He said the people using the depot either in its current place or moved to the east will be stopping for gas or getting food regardless of where it is located and he can't see spending the money yearly to maintain the new depot.
Figures have estimated the cost to be between $35,000 and $50,000 per year for a 20-year agreement.
"That's money that can't be spent on streets or for fire protection. I'm really torn on it right now, I guess that's the best way to say it," he said. "I get that people can see the downtown and the riverfront. It is beautiful down there, but they can see that when they are riding in from the east or the west, too. But I just can't see it bringing a lot of business downtown especially when most are closed on the second stop at 7 p.m."
Wright said he'd rather see the city put that money into attracting the Vikings Cruise Lines to the city.
"I think the Viking Cruise Line would benefit us more than a rail depot. I think investing in that and making sure it's aesthetically pleasing would be a great benefit for the town. There's no guarantee they're still looking at this location, but we would have to build a dock for them."
He said the Riverfront should be the centerpiece of the city but it's still underutilized.
"I think what Charles and Jenny (Craft) have done with the Riverfest has been wonderful to the community.
They are seeing success and the city is seeing it from bringing people in. But something has to be done with the marina and I don't know about a bar or nightclub but a restaurant. I'd like to see something done to the marina area with the boats. We've dredged and there are some other things we can do," he said.
He said the pavilion should also be cleaned up and renovated and made attractive for a company like Viking to come in and use.
Downtown is also a concern of Wright's. He said the current progress going on in the area is a good start, but he said he still thinks more needs to be done to fix up the properties and make them good places for more apartments and attractive store fronts.
"I'd like to see if we can find more funds to fix the facades. Bankers are doing great things with the Old Lee County Bank building and the Cattermole. I don't think you'll see much done with the Sears building, but these projects are going to help," he said. "Part of revitalization is making those building inhabitable. I would love to live downtown above a store front and have all that at hand. I think that would be a positive change."
Wright said the city needs to set its sights on the things that benefit the public in big ways, economically. He said the city isn't in the entertainment business so things like bowling alleys or skating rinks should be done with private investment but larger scale hotels, industries, and businesses that have a large impact on the community are the ones that should be incentivized.
"We are seeing the benefits of the incentives we gave to Siemens already and you always hear the rumors of others locating in that area, too. But anything we can do to spur economic development means spurring the development of the people of Fort Madison."
He said one of the main concerns he hears from people in the second ward is the condition of the streets and alleys in the city.
"My response is probably cold at times. It's an alley. It's not meant to be traveled so much and would you rather us put it into services and amenities or an alley. Lots of streets have been improved. Avenue E from 16th Street to 24th Street is done. 15th Street was done and it wasn't that long ago that 24th Street was done. My next thing would be Avenue F from 2nd to 22nd street.
He said the city has also been extending services like water and sewer to further reaches in an effort to grow the tax base of the community.
"People are always critical of property taxes and I don't want to see an increase, but I think we're doing the right things. We've made the investment to get infrastructure out and you work toward a bigger tax base when you can provide those things."
Wright said he doesn't believe in term limits and doesn't think the city should add anything to the code to address council members missing meetings. At Tuesday's meeting a suggestion was made from a resident to look into adding something to the code for attendance.
"I'm not a term limits guy. I believe that when the citizenry feels you haven't done your job, you address that at the polls," Wright said. "I feel it's a duty and obligation to come and represent your constituents, but I do know illness and family can come into play. I have a 90%+ attendance record but I believe there are extenuating circumstances. Nothing should be written into the code, that should be handled at election time."
