Judge tosses deal, sends FM woman to prison

Weiler pleads guilty in deal that had prosecution seeking suspended sentence

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG

PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON - A Fort Madison woman has been sentenced to up to 10 years in prison for embez- zling more than $70,000 from a local chiropractor's office.

Danylle L. Weiler, 48, of Chariton, was sentenced Friday morning by Eighth District Judge Michael Schilling to an indeterminate number of years in prison not to exceed 10 after Weiler pled guilty to a first-degree theft. Assistant Lee County Attorney Ross Braden, who prosecuted the case, said the judge sentenced Weiler according to the penalties allowed by law. However, Braden said he was not arguing for prison time for Weiler.

"I wouldn't say I was shocked by the sentence," Braden said Friday afternoon. "The facts and circumstances of the case justified the sentencing. But I didn't argue for that."

The case was scheduled for trial on three separate occasions in March, June, and August, but Braden said Weiler chose to plead guilty to the Class C Felony first-degree theft instead of going to trial, in exchange for the state not asking for prison time, but a suspended sentence and restitution.

Dreamers v. Realists: An interconnected dichotomy of choice

By now, you've identified yourself as one or the other, too, and as much as you'd like to, you really can't identify as both. So now that you've identified yourself, consider how you came to be a dreamer or realist.

I'm a pessimist. I don't know how I got this way, but nearly everyone who knows me personally will identify me as such. I find it hard to envision the positive results of anything, and even if things are going well for me, I'm always waiting for the proverbial other shoe to drop. I'm positive that the people who work with me and live with me on a daily basis find it maddening. In relation to the above quote, I consider myself a realist.

By now, you've identified yourself as one or the other, too, and as much as you'd like to, you really can't identify as both. So now that you've identified yourself, consider how you came to be a dreamer or realist.

More than likely, we were all dreamers at one point. I distinctly remember telling my first grade teacher that "There are dreamers and there are realists in this world. You would think that the dreamers would find the dreamers and the realists would find the realists, but more often than not, the opposite is true. You see, the dreamers need the realists to keep them from soar-ing too close to the sun. And the realists...well, without the dreamers, they might never get off the ground. “

Four local prep runners compete in state meet

Colder weather favors three seniors, sophomore at Lakeside Golf Course in Fort Dodge

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG

(Editor's Note: Full coverage from the state track meet with photos will be in tomorrow's e-Edition.)

FORT MADISON - Four area high school runners will put their heads in maybe a pretty chilly wind on Saturday in Fort Dodge and try to come home with medals at the state cross country meet.

Seniors Aaron Steffensmeier, Sierra Howardson, and Brett Schneider will run for Fort Madison on Saturday, while sophomore Matt Hellige will run for Holy Trinity Catholic.

The meet is held annually at the Lakeside Municipal Golf Course in Fort Dodge. Howardson and Schneider will take off on the 5K run at noon with the Class 3A girls meet. Steffensmeier will race at 12:30 with the Class 3A boys and Hellige runs at 2:30 in Class 1A boys.

The three runners from Fort Madison are all looking to medal, or place in the top 15 in the meet. Hellige on the other hand, being just a sophomore, says if he can finish in the top 30, that would be success for him.

“I barely missed (qualifying) last year,” he said. “Hopefully to be a top 30 would be a good goal.”

Hellige said the colder weather won’t bother him.

“I barely missed (qualifying) last year,” he said. “Hopefully to be a top 30 would be a good goal.”

Hellige said the colder weather won’t bother him.

“I once get to the start line I’ll take off my warm-up clothes off and just run in my uniform. I’d rather run in the cold than the heat,” he said.

With state less than two weeks away from districts, Hellige said he didn’t do a whole lot in the way of additional training.

“Well, we ran fewer miles the past couple of weeks so I could be fresher for state, but the training really has been pretty much the same.”

He said a top 30 finish would springboard him hope-fully into the top 20 as a junior and top 10 as a senior.

Senior Brett Schneider of Holy Trinity, usually fin-ished behind Howardson in meets this year by 30 to 45 seconds, but in the qualifying meet at Solon, Schneider closed the gap and finished just 13 behind her teammate.

Schneider, who has never placed at state, says her focus isn’t on winning the run, but running well and placing. As a sophomore she finished in 20th place with a time of 19:48.7. The IGHSAU website link for 2016 results wasn’t accessible on Friday.

“I would say for me - at this point - I’m going to - I’m going to state,” she said with a chuckle. “I’m more worried about placing and getting in that top 15 which I haven’t done yet. In the end, yeah, I’ll look at my time. I’m just hop-ing to run really well and place well. Doing that against the best runners in the state would be great my senior year,” Schneider said.

She said she prefers running in the colder weather, but in the end all the girls have to run in the same weather.

“I prefer that to heat. “Come down to how you run in the cold, and like I said, it comes down to how you run in the cold,” she said.

Schneider has qualified for state each year of high school, the first of which was with Holy Trinity in Class 1A and then the last two were with Fort Madison in Class 3A.

Howardson will also be running in her fourth state competition, but not all were run at Fort Dodge.

“This will be my third year at Fort Dodge, but I ran state at Tennessee my freshman year,” she said.

“Howardson moved into the Fort Madison school district in the middle of her freshman year. She said this year her focus is on running well and placing be-cause in the past three years, although she qualified for state, page 5 state, she has never placed. As a junior last year, Howardson didn't finish the race. "I was running third and then I passed out because I hadn't eaten enough for breakfast," she said. "So I've never really placed. This year I'm going to do everything right so I can place my senior year. That's what I'm focusing on."

She said head coach Brian Mendez had the girls do speed workouts Monday and Tuesday and then Wednesday through Friday they do shake out runs, which is a little different training than regular workouts during the year.

The website OpenWeatherMap.com is predicting a slight chance of snow possible on Friday, but clear skies and cold temperatures on Saturday with highs near 37 degrees.

The Girls 3A run begins at noon so temperatures should be near 30-35 degrees at that time. Howardson said the Iowa High School Girls Athletic Union has ruled to allow runners to wear tights and arm sleeves due to the colder temperatures. Howardson said she prefers to run in milder temperatures, but likes a breeze so the colder temperatures shouldn't be that much of a problem.

Mendez said despite rankings and the fact that Fort Madison runs in a tough district, he thinks all his runners are top 30 competitors.

“They played with rankings all year in and out of the top 30 and there's no doubt in my mind they're in the top 30 in the state. I think arguably were in one of the toughest districts and I think that gives us potential going into state. I've got a great group of kids, they're gritty and we're going to go up there and give it our all,” Mendez said.

HTC head coach Mohrfeld said state is a different dynamic for runners and Hellige will be in for a different run than he's seen this year.

“You're going to a kid who's been second or third all year and finished 8th at districts, which is still top the class, to a large group of kids. Matthew's going up there and we've run in the middle of the pack for a while,” Mohrfeld said. "We've talked all year about running your own race and not getting boxed in. It comes down to running a smart race strategically and I think Matthew's up to the challenge. The statue's built, you just don't want it fall apart."

Aaron Steffensenmier is going to his second state meet after qualifying as a sophomore. He didn't make it out of districts as a freshman or junior, but Mendez said Aaron's been running for six years and he's a runner that can complete and place on Saturday. "My goal is to medal and be in the top 15," Steffensenmier said. "I'm looking forward to the weather and maybe getting an edge on some of the runners.”

He said the training he's been through with Mendez over the past years has prepared him for this final cross country run.

"I think coach Mendez does a good job getting us in big meets so we know what we're up against."

Murder trial may start Feb. 13 at the trial. Kruse had set an arrangement for Friday, but a written arrangement and plea of not guilty were filed by Cook on Mayorga's behalf on Oct. 10. Nelson's body was discovered at the park at about 11 a.m. on Feb. 11 by visitors of the park. According to family members, Nelson was working construction at the Iowa Fertilizer Company prior to his death, but they weren't sure what his job status was when he was killed.

On Feb. 11th, the Lee County Sheriff's Office responded to a call of a possible deceased person at a Lee County roadside park near Waver, Iowa.

Upon arrival, a male subject, later identified as 47-year-old Nelson, was found deceased. An autopsy performed on Nelson determined that he was killed by a single gunshot to the head. According to Iowa Department of Criminal Investigations Special Agent Rick Rahn, since the body was discovered in Lee County, the court case would be handled there, however Mayorga has the option to ask for a change of venue.

Mayorga had been incarcerated in Muscatine county on a federal gun charge but was transported to Lee County on Sept 28 and charges were filed Friday with the Lee County Attorney's office.

Judge surprises court with ruling

Brad said the defense was asking for a deferred judgment but the state argued strongly against that motion. "I didn't ask for prison time because of her lack of criminal past, but I didn't think a deferred judgment was appropriate either."

Weiler's sentence was to begin immediately at Iowa Correctional Institute for Women in Mitchellville. She was facing five counts of theft in the crime, which occurred over a five-year time frame, according to a release that came from Fort Madison police when Weiler was charged in November. The release said she worked for the chiropractor for 15 years total.

She was originally charged with three counts of first-degree theft and two counts of 2nd-degree theft and faced close to 40 years in prison if convicted on all counts. Weiler was represented by Johnathan Stensvag of Burlington.

Who should take lead – Dreamers or Realists

I wanted to be a farmer. I didn’t have the wherewithal to make this happen, but it didn’t matter at that point.

My oldest daughter told my wife and I when she was five that she wanted to be a doctor during the day, and a veterinarian at night. We all know that while that dream may be improbable, improbable wasn’t on her mind. Because she was (and still is) a dreamer, I hope she never loses that spirit.

We are mostly dreamers at that point in life because we are encouraged. We are told we can be whatever we’d like to be if we work hard enough.

“You can be the president of the United States if you set your mind to it,” right? Right.

Unfortunately, as we get older, the world around us changes. The expectations get higher, and the decisions become more serious. At this point, the decision to be a dreamer comes with it the scrutiny of others considering you “unrealistic.” The realists consider dreamers inferior, or a form of intellectual snobbery that is terribly sad.

The realists sit around waiting for the dreamers to fail, so they can tell them “I told you so.” It’s a lonely existence being a dreamer.

Dreamers learn resiliency. They realize that failure is going to happen, and they must embrace it as a means of becoming a better version of themselves. They never quit believing that they can achieve whatever they set out to be. They have a growth mindset.

Realists are bad, then, right? No. Realists are the reason things move forward. All of us should continue to tell children as long as we can that they should be dreamers. That’s been established.

The actuality is that there are already many realists in the world, and they exist to set the stage for dreamers to thrive. Realists are managers. They envision the potholes. They have the forethought to create a plan centered around the dreamer’s ideas, and can help the dreamers navigate. Realists do it “what ifs,” which makes the “how?” possible.

Here’s the problem: being a realist by default makes you less likely to branch out to bigger and better things. Fear of failure becomes the motivating factor in every decision that a realist makes.

Failure isn’t embraced as a stepping stone for realists. In their minds, failure is a stopping point. “Better not do it that way,” says the realist. Meanwhile, the dreamer is figuring out what they did that caused them to fail, and correcting for success.

George Bernard Shaw said “people who say it cannot be done should not interrupt with those who are doing it.” I don’t quote Shaw to say that realists aren’t doing important work. But great things are achieved by dreamers.

So, what now? Well, I guess that depends on your desire to be great. I like quotes, so I’ll offer another: the Islamic scholar Rumi stated long ago “yesterday I was clever, so I wanted to change the world. Today I am wise, so I am changing myself.”
