LeeComm loses phone system Tuesday

Phone system back up and running Tuesday evening

MONTROSE - The Lee County 911 dispatch center lost phone service this morning, according to new director Shanna Krogmeier.

In a release from the center, Krogmeier said the phone lines went down at 10:30 a.m. and all 911 calls were being rerouted.

“At approximately 10:30 a.m this morning the phone lines to the Lee County dispatch center went down,” Krogmeier wrote. “We are working with our providers to re-route service. The public is advised to contact 911 for service at this time and calls will be rerouted to surrounding agencies while we work to remedy the situation.”

No information about the expected duration of the service was available.

Sheriff Stacy Weber said it appears the entire Lee County Sheriff’s Office, jail, and dispatch center’s line are down. “I would encourage anyone who needs to call 911,” Weber said. “They’re working hard to fix the problem.”

City, fire dept. efforts boost ISO rating

Rating boost should result in lower property insurance rates

BY CHUCK VANDEMBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON - City residents can thank the efforts of the city and the Fort Madison Fire Department for a pending reduction in their homeowner insurance rates.

The city’s fire department was recently assessed a rating of “3” from previously a “4” from the Insurance Service Organization. A “1” is the best ranking a fire department can get.

Fire Chief Joey Herren said the rating improvement is based on improvements on several fronts including water service, communications, and fire department improvements including training, equipment, and other efficiencies.

“It’s done by the ISO and they give us a public protection classification. Normally that’s on a 10-year rotation. When I became chief in 2006 we were a "5" and I started looking at things, we changed some things,” Herren said Tuesday.

But he said the city’s construction of a new water plant, combined with the new coordinated LeeComm dispatch center all contributed to moving the needle from a 5 to a 4. Then the additional training mechanisms and the use of Firehouse software to track the fire department’s progress, coupled with improvements on the inspection process all has helped the department get the “3” rating.

Herren said now the ISO group is looking to move City’s ISO rating to a “2”. Sheriff Stacy Weber has set his goal on a “2”.

The rental inspection program Doug and I go out and do has resulted in a reduction of fires... That’s one of the factors that made it drop down.

- Joey Herren, FM Fire Chief

Montrose - The Lee County Jail will get a partial boost to staffing possibly by the end of the month.

At Tuesday's regular meeting of the Lee County Board of Supervisors, the board approved immediately hiring two more full-time correctional officers despite a motion being on the floor to hire four.

Lee County Sheriff Stacy Weber had asked the board at last week's meeting to add at least four full-time correctional officers due to a steady increase in jail population. Weber told the board that at this year's budget meeting, the jail population has increased 20% compared to the previous year.

But supervisors Gary Folluo and Ron Fedler balked at the four and no second was given. The motion didn't cover the costs of the new staff.

Supervisor Matt Pflug made a motion to approve the four new officers citing an increase in fees being collected to support the costs of the new staff.

 Supervisor Don Hunold was not in attendance.

“The department currently has 14 full-time jail staff and five part-time positions that cover vacations and time off and other down times for the full-time staff. The jail is down one part-time officer currently. Two would be a very conservative approach I think.”

West Point to ask for 2-year 28E deal with Donnellson

Wine Walk set for Dec. 1 on the square from 5 to 8 p.m.

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG

WEST POINT- The West Point City Council approved a two-month extension to its current shared policing agreement with Donnellson.

At Monday’s regular meeting of the council, Mayor Paul Walker said the agreement was set to expire and he wanted to extend the 28E agreement between the two cities.

City Administrator Gary Menke said the agreement was extended just to the beginning of the year and then West Point was going to look at asking for a two-year agreement going forward to allow the agreements to cycle with elections.

“We had a meeting with Donnellson Monday to work out the agreement,” Walker said. “They only thing that was probably the biggest change is they want another 6-month agreement and I would ask that we approve it for two years. The reason why is because it would be near election years and so if a new mayor or council comes in and they don’t like it, they have a chance to bail out. That way we don’t have to go through the process every six months,” Walker said.

The agreement initially went into effect this summer after Donnellson Police Chief Tom Oberman left for the Lee County Sheriff’s office. Walker and Donnellson city officials began hammering out an agreement where West Point Police Chief Brad Roberts would serve as chief for both cities and would supervise the Donnellson reserve force. Other cost sharing mechanisms are in place including vehicle and fuel costs and a monthly payment to West Point from Donnellson.

In other action:

• the council also heard from Carrie Green on the city’s first Wine Walk which will be held on Friday, Dec. 1 from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. on the square in West Point. Katie’s Cuts, City Hall and Sonny’s are offering the glasses in advance for a $10 donation or $15 on the night of the vent. The West Point Community Club is putting on the event. Green said the group has raised more than $700 in donations from the glasses.

• the council heard from Holy Trinity Catholic Head Baseball Coach Albert Schinstock about the city possibly funding new dirt for the baseball field at South Park. Menke recommended that Schinstock look to the HTC boosters and the Community Club to share in the cost, but the city could find the funds to help with the cost. The council also allowed Schinstock to leave the outfield boards up all season. Walker advised that if wind damaged the fences due to the boards being left up all year, the fencing would need to be replaced.

Better rating helps recruitment efforts

The inspections to a three to five-year rotation. He said the assessment begins with a pre-survey of the department.

“We have to send in that pre-survey for the assessment. We fill that out and get points for different areas of that form.”

The new water plant has helped with the pressure of the water at hydrants across the city, which are tested regularly by the city water department. A higher water pressure is indicative of better water flow, which yields a better score on that criteria. The dispatch center provided a centralized dispatch system that results in a quicker response time and quicker response in better communication.

Herren said a class “3” rating or better.

He said the fire department had a big hand in the higher rating as well.

“On our side of it, it’s about trucks and personnel. About how we respond with tandem trucks and our fleet being as updated as it is. That keeps us in good standing.” Herren said. One of our biggest improvements is how well we record our training. We now use Firehouse for all our recording. There’s different modules on that system, so now all training is recorded and building inspections are done through that software and it’s very good.”

Another area that resulted in additional points for the department was the new inspection process. Herren said the new rental and commercial inspection processes have created a risk reduction and that meant points as well. He said the city’s rental inspection program conducted by City Building Director Doug Krogmeier and Herren has really cut down on the risk and actual fires in the city.

“The rental inspection program that Doug and I go out and do has really resulted in reduction of fires. We think it’s that program. We used to have a lot of extension cord fires where people overload them. We really hit that now with the rental owners and tell them they have to cut back on that and we’ve seen good results there.” Herren said. “I have no way of saying that’s what caused it, because I don’t. But that’s one of the other factors that made it drop down.”

He said there has been push back on the inspections from property owners, but now those property owners may be able to see the financial benefits of the program, aside from the safety aspect.

Herren said there are only 3,409 fire departments in the country that have a class “3” rating or better.

The ratings also help when attracting manufacturing and industry. That reduces the insurance costs for people looking to locate here. They also like to see that we have a pretty efficient fire department.

He said she spoke with a city insurance agent this morning who told him rates would drop shortly for city property owners. “I spoke with them this morning and they said commercial and residential rates should drop 5% to 8% and that really shows that we have an efficient fire department.”

A rating of 3 means the city fire department scored between 70 and 79 points. Herren said Fort Madison scored 73.5 points and getting to the rating of “2” may not save the city enough on the insurance side of things to substantiate the cost to the city to get there.

“It’s a risk vs. reward type thing,” Herren said. “We would have to add staff and do some other things to get that rating to go up and you have to measure how much you’d have to spend to get that higher ranking. But this is a nice feather in our cap and it’s telling you we have a very efficient department.”

RURAL RESIDENTS ASK ABOUT HIGH SPEED INTERNET

Feleder said the county has to be responsible with taxpayer money.

“I agree with Stacy, he needs more officers, but we have an obligation to provide the financing from the county,” said Supervisor Ron Fedler. “This isn’t a one-time expense. This will be going on all the time. So if we could find a way where we can provide the money to staff them that’s where my concern is without deficit spending,” Fedler said.

Fedler said he could support getting two now and then looking at adding two in the new budget process.

Pflug amended his motion to two officers and Fedler seconded that motion which passed 4-0.

“It’s well-needed,” Folluo said. “It’s just that adding $228,000 to an already established budget is a huge hit,” Folluo said.

Prause said with the increased fees the department is billing for services, the budget should be able to absorb the increased costs.

After the meeting, Weber said he appreciated the work of the board and reiterated that he hated to see a potential property tax hike, but he has a responsibility to his staff, his department, and the jail inmates.

He also said he didn’t support a plan of attrition which Folluo suggested at last week’s meeting to help offset increased jail costs.

“I don’t want to see the attrition thing. We worked hard to get the extra deputies and the people appreciate that. They like to see detectives come to their crime scenes. The world is changing and we need to stay up with it,” he said.

In an unrelated topic, the board also heard from West Point residents Mike Flock and Rusty Robbins about the lack of high speed internet access in some rural Lee County areas. Folluo told them it was matter of dollars and cents and companies weren’t required to come out and provide the service. Robbins and Lisco has provided service to several individual landowners but won’t hook up those that are still without the service.

“We kind of feel like the step-children of Lee County out here,” Robbins said.
