CL student arrested after school threat

Student made threats on school trip about wanting to commit violent act against the school with a firearm

DONNELLSON - According to Lee County Sheriff Stacy Weber, a Central Lee High School student has been arrested after an investigation into a threat to commit an assault involving a firearm at the school.

Detectives were called to the Central Lee High School immediately after school officials had learned of the threat. The student was interviewed and subsequently arrested and charged with harassment in the first degree, an aggravated misdemeanor. The student is also under 18 years of age, therefore authorities are not required by Iowa Code to release the name.

Weber said the parents of the student have been extremely cooperative and have surrendered all their firearms to local law enforcement. The Lee County Sheriff’s department released a statement on Facebook, citing a tech issue with the department’s email service. The Facebook post had more than 55,000 views and 200 shares within 24 hours.

“The investigation is ongoing, but we felt the public needed to know the threat was taken seriously and charges were filed immediately,” Weber said. “The Sheriff’s office would like to assure the public that steps have been taken to ensure the safety of our school and the students who attend it.”

A statement placed on the district Facebook page stated the following:

“On Friday, February 23rd, the district was provided an anonymous tip about a high school student who, at a recent school activity trip, made verbal threats of committing an act of violence with a weapon. Upon

LCHD chaplains help times of passing

FORT MADISON - At points in our lives the unknown can be daunting. The unexpected can cause anxiety and fears. When it comes to Hospice, end-of-life care can be uncharted territory for patients and their loved ones. The Hospice Chaplain looks to be not only spiritual guidance, but a friend a patient and their family may need to help them on this journey.

Lee County Health Department – Hospice is fortunate to have two Hospice Chaplains to work with families. Larry Wallingford, Living Water Assembly of God in Keokuk, recently joined the team in September 2017 as our Hospice Chaplain, and John Simpson, First Christian Church in Fort Madison, has been on the LCHD-Hospice Team since 2000.

"Having two chaplains as part of our hospice team allows us to better serve our client base," said Teresa Gilbert, LCHD Hospice Program Director. "Both go above and beyond to assist our clients and their families.

For Pastor Wallingford the call to be a Hospice Chaplain happened when he spoke with Gilbert at a funeral. He felt a calling to work with hospice, and made it known to Gilbert. "I believe I have the skill set, compassion, growth, maturity and integrity to serve in the position, and so far it has been an enjoyable experience and a calling to serve in the position," said Wallingford.

We are proud to be an integral part of the community," said Jeremy Alexander, President/CEO of FMCH.

"FMCH is definitely an important contributor to the strength of the Lee County economy. We are fortunate to have such a robust employer, community partner and provider of quality health care services in Lee County," said Tim Gobble, Executive Director of the Fort Madison Partners.

The IHA study examined the jobs, income, retail sales and sales tax produced by hospitals and the rest of the state’s health care sector. The study was compiled from hospital-submitted data on the American Hospital Association’s Annual Survey of Hospitals and receiving this tip, the district administration acted immediately and contacted the Lee County Sheriff’s Office.

The district searched the student's locker, computer, and personal belongings but found no weapon or evidence of a plan to commit an act of violence. The student was interviewed by local Lee County Sheriff detectives. Information has been turned over to the county attorney for any criminal charges. The student has been suspended from school grounds and activities for the near future. The district administration will make a determination of the student's enrollment at Central Lee after a full investigation is completed.

Safety and security are the utmost importance for the Central Lee School District. The district encourages our stakeholders to alert us of any suspicious activity or verbal/written threats. By working together, we can make our community and schools safe for our students.” Weber said further information may be provided by the Lee County Attorney's Office at a later date.

“Buy flying a plane and shooting a gun have nothing else in common.”

Okay. Let’s talk about things that are harder to get than guns.

When you buy cold medicine like Sudafed, Mucinex-D, and Zyrtec-D, you not only have to show identification but must be a “California legal” firearm), a customer providing the gun is a licensed dealer in the state of California, the party must complete both a Private Party Transfer form and the dealer submits a Dealer’s Record of Sales form. The ten day period is still intact.

All handgun purchasers (excluding private party transfers and Certificate of Eligibility holders) are limited to one handgun purchase per 30 days. To buy a handgun, the party must have a Firearm Safety Certificate, which is obtained through taking a written test proctored by a DOJ instructor and is valid for only five years. They must also perform a Safe Handling Demonstration. The FSC requirement applies to all firearms. If a party wants to buy a gun in Nevada and bring it back to California, they would have to go through a registered Federal Firearms License who would ship it to another Federal Firearms License in California, who would then complete the Dealer’s Record of Sales form and the ten day period is intact. This doesn’t nearly cover all of California’s gun laws, but you get the idea.

California is number eight on the CDC’s index of firearm mortalities from 2016. Florida is number 25. While California had more deaths total, Florida had more deaths per person. California had 7.9. Florida had 12.6. With a higher population, higher percentage of immigrants (29% vs. 19.5% in 2014), and cities known for violence, California had less deaths from firearms per person. Because of their gun laws. Because of the laws
Starting the Conversation

Part of the hospice journey for a chaplain involves the navigation of finding a commonality between them and the patient and family. Both Simpson and Wallingford agree that they will spend time just letting the patient do the talking. Asking questions about how they met their spouse, how long they’ve lived in the area, what sort of work they did—all these seem to bring people together and to ease into possibly more difficult topics like dying and heaven. “I want them to feel safe in sharing whatever they have on their mind and in their heart,” states Wallingford. “I try to focus on the basic needs of every person is loved and cared for. If I am able to do that then we find that common ground.”

Simpson says he loves a good story. “I try to get them to share memories. The more they talk, the better I like it.”

Simpson said he will ask a family if they would like to pray. “Some take me up on the offer, and some don’t, which is completely fine,” he said.

Wallingford has had families who wish to pray about non-related hospice issues. He feels that at this stage of life some feel forgotten. “I’ve only worked in hospice for a short time, but even for their families, there is a sense of being overlooked.”

Wallingford said, “So I try to send a note so they know I’ve remembered them, and that I am praying for them.”

Celebration of Life

As pastors, they see firsthand working with families through the lifespan. Meeting with a young couple who is preparing for marriage. Then seeing that couple start a family and seeing families grow through the many celebrations of life, including the celebration of life at a funeral. For Wallingford, working in hospice has taught him to slow down and take time to value life, and that is something he tries to express in his visits.

“Life is so short. It’s here and then it’s gone,” he said. “It’s amazing what a short phone call, a note, a card, or a short visit does to encourage people at the end of their life.” Those small gestures mean something not only to the patient, but to the family as well.”

Simpson said no matter the path one takes the end is the same for everyone. “In my position as a pastor, and as a hospice chaplain, we are invited into the personal lives of one’s life journey. It may be toward the end of that journey, but we are still on the path together,” Simpson said.

Lee County Health Department – Hospice began offering hospice services in 1989; making them the first hospice in Southeast Iowa. They serve Lee, Des Moines, Henry, Van Buren counties in Iowa, and Hancock and Henderson counties in Illinois. For some, hospice can be a realization of what is to come. For those who practice a religion, and for those who don’t, entering hospice can bring up the “what’s next” question. “I don’t avoid the subject of death, nor do I focus on it entirely,” Simpson said. “I let them tell me their feelings, share their faith traditions, and how they feel about things, particularly about dying.”

It is sort of that elephant in the room. The subject that should be discussed, but the one many don’t want to. Simpson keeps in mind that death is the one thing everyone has in common. For those who haven’t practiced their religion in a while, and for those who don’t believe, the LCHD-Hospice Chaplains are still available for those who would like to visit.

Chaplains are still available for those who would like to visit. Some feel forgotten.

Wallingford said, “So I try to send a note so they know I’ve remembered them, and that I am praying for them.”

the state has imposed on its citizens.

Ask for my sources. I’ll give them to you. And if you see something that you know to be incorrect, please tell me. I’m open to changing my opinion. But these are the facts that I have checked and double checked and that I believe to be true and accurate. You can scream “Fake News” all you want. You can say that I can’t possibly be able to form this opinion on my own, that I’m being paid to do this, that I am an actor. You can doubt that my opinion should be broadcast to the media because I’m seventeen. I haven’t graduated high school, I don’t have my college degree, I don’t have enough experience to have an opinion. You’re wrong.

I have the experience of waking up 1,000 miles away from my little brother to find out that his school was on lockdown because of a threat made by a seventeen-year-old boy with a violent streak. I have the experience of learning that there’s a rumor going around your school is on lockdown because of a threat made by a seventeen-year-old boy with a violent streak. I have the experience of checking the news the day after both of these threats to find headlines of local newspapers talking about a new restaurant that opened.

I have the experience of being scared for my life when a gunman is storming your school and you’re mistaken for a shooter and arrested and mistake them as sarcastic. I have the experience of hiding in a classroom from a CHILD with a deadly weapon used by our own military to fight wars. I haven’t had to pray to whatever God exists for mercy, for this to please end, for whatever is happening to stop because I’m scared. I have, however been through my own trauma. And I can tell you that these children that you’re trying SO HARD to ignore will not go away because when we’ve been hurt, when we’re scared and determined and frustated with the people who are supposed to know more than we do we will never give up on changing something we know is wrong.

We aren’t children anymore. When you’re mistaken for a shooter and arrested and your thoughts go to the people you could have saved, you’ve lost your childhood. When you see your friend shot by a military-grade weapon and you have to stay quiet so that you won’t be next, you’ve lost your childhood. When a gunman is storming your school and you’re crying silently and hiding and praying, you’ve lost your childhood.

We aren’t children anymore. When you’re mistaken for a shooter and arrested and your thoughts go to the people you could have saved, you’ve lost your childhood. When you see your friend shot by a military-grade weapon and you have to stay quiet so that you won’t be next, you’ve lost your childhood. When a gunman is storming your school and you’re crying silently and hiding and praying, you’ve lost your childhood.

No one should have to. Our gun laws were written over 200 years ago, when the guns didn’t shoot 400 rounds per minute, when ammunition wasn’t easy to reload, when we didn’t have what we have now. I believe that the citizens should have the right to protect themselves from a tyrannical gov- ernment. I do not believe that guns should be outlawed completely. I believe that our gun situation today is out of hand because we have more guns than we have people, because so far, in 2018, we’ve had 18 active school shootings, because the people or gun debate is still on the table. We need restrictions. I’m going to be able to vote in November. A lot of the survivors of the shootings will be. You can bet that I’ll be rallying and campaigning and doing my best to reform the laws in this country because right now they aren’t protecting us.

I said I had questions for you. Here they are. Do not make them as sarcastic. How many more will it take? How many more dead children, dead students, dead teachers will it take before you relent? How many more ‘mentally disturbed’ terrorrists will it take for you to decide that enough is enough? When will you realize that yes, it is partially a gun problem? I’m not denying that there is definitely a component to these shootings that doesn’t come from guns. The people who carry these out are mentally ill. But the arguments that says it’s on the parents for not raising their children properly, the arguments that say it’s about morals, it’s about the lack of God in our government, those argu- ments are ridiculous. It’s about the lack of mental health care available in this country. That’s another argument. I’ll have that one another time. The children are leading this movement. Do you realize how ridiculous that is? I do. And I’m standing with those same kids who, last week, were scared for their lives because a maniac who was known to be mentally disturbed and mentally ill was allowed to purchase a military grade assault rifle. You don’t have to agree with me. You don’t have to like me. It won’t matter what you feel towards me because this is bigger than a single person, a single issue, or a single shooting.
