Kurtz joins race for Kearns’ House seat

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON - Fort Madison resident Jeff Kurtz has announced plans to run this year for the Iowa House District 83 seat.

Kurtz sent out a press release on Friday at about 11 a.m. announcing his “Let’s Get Iowa Back on Track” kick-off event Tuesday at the Newberry Center in Fort Madison beginning at 5 p.m. The seat is currently held by Jerry Kearns who announced earlier this year that he would not be seeking re-election.

The district includes the cities of Keokuk, Fort Madison, Montrose, and the Southern and Eastern Townships of Lee County.

Kurtz said Friday afternoon he thinks it’s even odds on whether the Democrats can take back control of the legislature.

“I’m hopeful we can,” Kurtz said. “I’m about 50-50 on it. It seems like a lot of people are really disgruntled and I don’t know how that translates to Nov. 6, we’ll see. If we don’t then we shift to defense and may be slow some of this stuff down.”

Kurtz, currently will face Fort Madison Democrat Robert Morawitz, who’s also officially announced his run in a June 5 primary. Other candidates could surface as paperwork can’t be turned into the county until Monday, with a March 28 filing deadline.

Kurtz said what has happened and is continuing to happen with the pending tax bill has derailed the state, including a $1.2 billion tax cut bill and the possibility of reneging on commercial property tax backfill.

“The backfill issue might be the least of our problems, when you look at what they did with Chapter 20 and underfunding education.”

-Jeff Kurtz, District 83 candidate

Buffalo61 trial run morphs to packed house

FORT MADISON - The old Field of Dreams adage - if you build it they will come - rang true at Fort Madison’s newest bar and grille Thursday night.

A soft open, originally planned for staff and friends, turned Thursday night into a full-on packed house as city residents wanted to take a look and see what Chase and Jen Gibb are up to.

The couple also own the Buffalo Tavern in FORT MADISON - City officials will vote on Tuesday to approve the 2018-19 fiscal year budget as well as spending vote on a budget that includes a $216,000 new roof for City Hall.

At Tuesday's regular meeting of the Fort Madison City Council, councilmen will vote on a budget that includes a 15.564 general mill levy. That number compares to the 2017-18 fiscal year budget levy of $15.911 and is the amount the city collects per $1,000 of assessed valuation of city residential, commercial, and industrial property.

Outside of the $8.10, the city levies for liability, property and any self-insurance costs, local emergency management services, employee benefits such as retirement costs, local emergency management services, employee benefits such as retirement costs, and debt service. The city can also receive levy of $15.911 and is the amount collected per $1,000 of assessed valuation of city residential, commercial, and industrial property.

Outside of the $8.10, the city levies for liability, property and any self-insurance costs, local emergency management services, employee benefits such as retirement costs, and debt service. The city can also receive a waiver of subdivision requirements for a plat of land owned by Thomas and Ingrid Waters at 3333 200th Street.

Catering, beer garden in the works at Buffalo61

General Manager Bianca Blanchard said she started to get a feeling something big was happening when Gibb came out of the building and said they were opening the bar, which wasn’t part of the original soft open plans - and going to a full menu.

“People started showing up so we just let them,” Gibb said. “That’s what we’re doing all weekend, just trying to get employees used to how we’re going to operate. Blanchard left a career at Great River Health Systems to take a shot at Buffalo61 after she saw the Buffalo Tav-ern was expanding into Fort Madison where she lives.

The ‘soft openings’ continue Friday and Sat-urday from 5 p.m to 10 p.m. on Sunday with regular business hours starting on Monday at 11 a.m. The restaurant will be open Sunday to Tuesday from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. and Wednesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to midnight or “whenever” according to the new logo on the front door.

Blanchard was a supervisor in environmental services at GRHS and had been there 10 years before leaving.

“I loved my job there. I really did, but this excited me. I wasn’t really looking for another job, but when he posted that he was opening in Fort Madison, I thought this would be fun to do. Everyone wants to make money, but I think that’s where Chase and Jen fit in so well. They have a family-oriented style and they are very involved. They are amazing but they’re family and they’re hands-on and I like that. Jen, Bertends and seats people, Chase helps in the kitchen or at the bar or wherever. People like to see the owners and these two are very involved. I’d bet almost everyone learns very quickly who Chase and Jen are.”

Current staff levels are close to 35, but Blanchard said they will run overstaff during the soft runs so people get a feel for the restaurant.

“Thursday’s first live day was all Blanchard and Gibb expected and more. “It was busy, but it will get busier,” Gibb said. “The menu will be the same as the Buffalo Tavern in Burlington, but the Fort Madison location will offer ribs as a weekly special. Blanchard said that might be Wednesday. But with items like BigAss Tacos and the Mother Chucker...an epic buffalo chicken sandwich, Gibb said this isn’t healthy eating.”

“This is comfort food. This is what people are wanting. You can get a ribeye sandwich anywhere,” Gibb said. “But you’re not going to get the ranch ribeye sandwich we have here, because no one can duplicate that ranch seasoning.”

Blanchard said this food is something different.

“Everyone says a taco is a taco - it’s not. It’s the same with a tenderloin, a tenderloin is not a tenderloin. He’s got that seasoning - and he has one of the top five tenderloins in the state, so it’s not your typical food here,” Blanchard said.

“The bar is a fully stocked bar with 12 beers on tap. Blanchard said those brands will change at different times of the year, but some like Blue Moon and Budweiser will always be there ice cold and ready to go.

Gibb said he probably won’t see profits in the first year.

“I probably won’t make any money in the first year, honestly. I would think everyone we make in the first year will go back into the business.”

Gibb is still in the middle of construction but has the inside completely renovated, moving the bar from the north wall to the center, and has completely reset the seating arrangement around the bar. Gibb said seating is set now at 135 with a max capacity of 155 people.

The awnings have been removed and will be replaced with Gibb’s trademark yellow-and-black striped awnings.

“They’re pretty tacky...that’s how I like it. You’ll certainly notice it when you drive by,” he said.

He also said catering is a top priority for the restaurant.

“That’s something that we want to get going very quickly. So once the staff has this under control, we’re going to get that going as well. We think there is a demand here for that and we have some great options there.”

He said there are still some other things to get done but the restaurant is at a point where it’s time to let the community in.

“I’d like to put a beer garden out here on the northeast side of the property,” he said.

There’s a lot that still needs done, from stripes on the building, parking lot and dumpster area cleaned up and organized.

Kurtz has labor roots with career in railroad pass something like this tax bill there’s going to be very little left. We’re already dipping into reserves and look to what’s happened in Kansas and Oklahoma where they tried the same thing.”

Kurtz has been politically active in the past serving as President of BLET Local 391 for eight years and as Iowa State Legislative Board Chairman from 2004-2014.

“I’ve been politically active for quite a while. I was the head of our legislative department in Iowa and would make frequent trips to the legislature. I’ve been retired for more than three years and enjoying retirement and doing some work with labor federations,” he said. “But I got into some policy as I saw how hard it was for people working together. With this current political climate and having one party in charge, I don’t see how we get anything progressive done.”

In his release on Friday, Kurtz said he wanted to help Iowans with jobs, economic development, and getting Iowa... back on track.

“I intend to focus this campaign on jobs and economic development, on fully funding education and essential public services, and restoring devastating cuts to our mental health and Medicaid system,” Kurtz wrote in the release. “We also must focus on rebuilding our communities by not only creating jobs but making sure the jobs created pay a decent wage and have good benefits.

“Iowa has been an education leader for generations, but Republicans seem determined to change that. Senate leaders just approved a paltry 1% increase in state funding which amounts to an average increase of only $67 per student. This will cause schools to close, classroom sizes to increase, good teachers to leave the state, and a generation of students will suffer for it.”

Kurtz said he is also motivated by the decision of the legislature to take away union rights for public workers.

“Under the current Republican leadership, Iowa is heading in the wrong direction,” he said. “In the last year we saw the state take away rights from teachers, police officers, correctional guards, firefighters, bus drivers, and other public-sector workers who are the backbone of our community. This is not the Iowa I know and love. Iowans deserve better.”

Kurtz was born in Fort Madison and has lived there most of his life. Jeff graduated from Aquinas High School in 1972. He attended Southeastern Iowa Community College and Iowa State University before joining the Santa Fe Railroad in 1974, first as a locomotive fireman, before being promoted to locomotive engineer in 1975.

Throughout his career, Jeff held multiple positions within the union, including serving as President of BLET Local 391 for eight years and as Iowa State Legislative Board Chairman from 2004-2014, where Jeff lobbied extensively for rail safety at both state and federal levels. Jeff retired from the BNSF Railroad in 2014 with almost forty-one years of service.

He has long been active with the labor movement in Iowa. Most recently he was a co-chair of the Lee County Raise the Wage Coalition which succeeded in passing a local minimum wage ordinance prior to the legislature’s preemption bill. He has been married to his wife Debbie for 38 years and they are the proud parents of three children, Adam of Fort Madison, Nathan of Maryland, and Mindy McPherson of Cedar Rapids. The couple also has four grandchildren.
