City’s neighborhood watch groups looking to add people

More than 20 people gathered Sunday as part of a citywide neighborhood watch update. Three current groups, including the 34th Place Neighborhood Watch, the Dry Creek Neighborhood Watch, and the Lincoln Neighborhood Watch attended to hear an update and listen to plans.

Signs, fundraising, and RiverFest were on the agenda Sunday

By Chuck Vandenberg

FORT MADISON -

After nearly four years of activity, three neighborhood watch groups in Fort Madison met Sunday to talk about the progress of the effort to help curb crime in their neighborhoods.

In November 2014, Steve Howard and Lorie Seager were instrumental in putting together the 34th Place Neighborhood Watch Group, one of the first watch groups the city had in decades after residents tired of petty crimes in their areas. Soon after, the Dry Creek Neighborhood Watch Group and the Lincoln Neighborhood Watch groups formed to keep an eye on the riff-raff going in and out of their neighborhoods.

Jeff Smith of the Dry Creek group led the discussion on what issues are facing the group and one of the first things mentioned was getting signage posted in the neighborhoods to let residents and criminals - know the groups are up, running, and active.

Smith said because the signs are typically posted on city property, the city has to install the signs, Seager said when 34th Place purchased their neighborhood watch signs the city had them in place very quickly.

Smith said several members of those groups had spoken with city officials about the signs, which have been purchased and are ready for installation. He said city officials have indicated that right now potholes and street maintenance are a high priority and the signs may have to take a back seat. Several members of the group agreed to keep trying to reach out to the city at different levels to try and get the posts and signs installed.

Two of the signs will be posted on Lincoln Elementary fencing to show the children, parents, neighbors, and criminals that they are being watched.

The group also talked about fundraising efforts, See WATCH, page 8

Three is no charm for life on the farm

Ginnie's been having a rough go lately. The other night she was delivering a dozen eggs to my son and his family. She had a nice chat with my son and his wife at their front door (they were all happy about the farm-fresh eggs), and then she left. Ginnie drives a new Nissan Rogue that she dearly loves. It's the first car she's owned with a rear camera. As she was backing out of my son's driveway, she heard a crunch. A sinking feeling started in her chest and wrought through to her toes. She got out of the car and went around to take a look. Sure 'nuff, she had crushed a rear fender against a tree. "How could I have done this?" she screamed internally to herself. "The first car I've ever owned with a rear camera, and look what I've done!"

Our body man was understanding. $3,700, thank you, ma'am.

The next morning, still upset about wrecking her new car, Ginnie was having a hot flash. She turned on the ceiling fan in the kitchen and stripped off some clothing. Wouldn't you know it, I saw a flashing movement go by the kitchen window. I holstered at Ginnie to cover herself. Too late. The UPS man was at the open kitchen door, knocking. There's nothing like being caught with half your clothes off!

But it wasn't over. Trouble come in threes. That evening we had a scant supper because Ginnie had bell-choir practice at church. She was scurrying around trying not to be late. She wanted to wash her car and get gas on the way, so that she would be ready for her commute to work the next morning.

She also wanted to stop at the supermarket and pick up goodies. It was her turn for treats at work. Rush, rush, rush. I was looking forward to a little quiet time for some reading, and maybe a nap in my recliner. I had just settled in when I received a text from Ginnie. It was the wrong night. She was a day off. Bell-choir practice was on Wednesday, this was Tuesday.

I felt bad for her threesome of bad luck and was quite some time.

Reynolds orders review of Iowa Finance office

(DES MOINES) – Gov. Kim Reynolds ordered an independent review of the Iowa Finance Authority (IFA) on Friday of the reports of sexual harassment by former IFA Executive Director David Jamison.

Des Moines attorney Mark Weinhardt will head the investigation and will submit a report to the Governor’s Office and the Attorney General’s Office to investigate the conduct that led to Jamison’s firing and what was known about it.

“Since the victims reported these horrible allegations, their safety and privacy have been my top priority,” Gov. Reynolds said. “Now that one of the victims has made the decision to release the specific details of the harassment, I am ordering an independent review of David Jamison’s conduct and what was known about it.”

Johnston, Larson/Shirai take titles in Burlington

BY PCC STAFF

BURLINGTON - Kearstyn Johnson continued her hot tennis for the Fort Madison Bloodhounds as she won the title at No. 3 singles at the Burlington Invitational on Saturday at Dankwardt Park.

But the biggest story of the day may have been a win for FMHS at No. 1 doubles when the Hounds’ Katie Larson and Miho Shirai knocked off Fairfield’s Annatta Charoenkul and Hermela Gabremariam 9-7 in the first to 8 win-by-two format.

The FMHS duo had a bye in the first round and then dumped Notre Dame’s Lydia Becker and Claire Hackenmiller 8-5 to advance to the title match against Charoenkul and Gabremariam.

Johnson, who was ranked No. 1 in the state at the No. 3 spot going into the tourney, downed Alyssa Duran of Davenport North 8-2 in the semis after a first-round bye and then scored an 8-5 win over Fairfield’s Cami Schaeffer for the title.

At No 2 singles, Shirai had a bye in round one and then beat Hackenmiller 8-3 to advance to a title shot against Fairfield’s Yana Gaskell who repeat- ed an 8-1 win over Shirai from a week ago, to win the title and give Shirai a second place finish.

Larissa Ferrill had a bye in round one at No. 4 singles and then dropped Burlington’s Lydia Becker and Claire Hackenmiller 8-3 to advance to the title match against Kennedy Rheinschmidt. She lost 3-8 in the finals, to take second place.

At No 5 singles, Mercedee Doty received a bye in the first round and then was dispatched by Davenport North’s Sabrina Duran 8-9 (3-7 tiebreaker). Lanie Kuntz started with a bye at No. 6 singles and was was downed by Isabella Tranquillo 8-4 in the semis.

At No 2 doubles, Johnson and Larissa Ferrill rolled to an easy 8-0 win over Davis County’s Allison Jones and Rebekah Settles before being shut out by Burlington Notre Dame’s Riley Brueck and McKenzie Fry 0-8.

For the Hounds at No. 3 doubles, Mercedee Doty and Lani Kuntz couldn’t get past Davis County’s Avery Thompson and Isabella Tranquillo, 2-8 in the semifinals after getting a bye in the first round.

Fundraising, spreading word is top of mind with group which help offset operational costs and equipment purchases.

Howard said the 34th Place watch group has been taking cans to a redemption center in Mt. Pleasant. With redemption centers in Fort Madison closed down, groceries are once again taking cans but on a limited basis. He said when his watch group takes cans to Mt. Pleasant it usually yields about $120 for the group and they go once or twice a month.

The 34th Place group has done fundraisers to replace the flags at Soldier’s Circle in Oakland Cemetery, and announced Sunday that they will be awarding two $800 scholarships to a student from Fort Madison High School and a student from Holy Trinity Catholic High School.

The group is also holding other grassroots fundraisers like garage sales to purchase things like radios, flashlights, and reflective vests.

Howard said the funds are important to keep things moving.

“When we first started this, we wanted nothing to do with the money - nothing. But then, a few of us kept throwing money into it and said, ‘We can’t keep doing this’ so we started looking at ways to raise funds,” Howard said.

He invited the other groups to travel with them to Mt. Pleasant to redeem the cans and share the costs of the trip.

The group also decided to look into the possibility of getting an information booth at Riverfest in August. The festival, which runs Aug. 3-6 is featuring 80s, 90s, and current rock this year, along with local favorites and a country act on Sunday.

The watch groups want to set up an information booth to let people know what is happening with the group, and more importantly, how they can get a watch group going in their neighborhood. A committee was set up to look into getting the booth.

Howard said the funds are important to keep things moving.

“The group agreed to meet again in August.
