Keokuk PD makes KPLAY theft, forgery arrest

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

KEOKUK – A Keokuk man has been arrested in connection with the misuse of funds and forgery associated with the non-profit KPLAY organization.

On Wednesday Keokuk Police Chief Dave Hinton released the arrest of Stephen Tyler McGhghy of rural Keokuk, age 36, at 10:15 a.m. He was charged with 2nd-degree theft and four counts of forgery.

"On October 24th, 2018, on a warrant for Theft 2nd Degree and, Four Counts of Forgery. The arrest is the result of an investigation into the misappropriation of money donated to a local non-profit organization, which McGhghy was serving as the president of. The investigation was conducted by the Keokuk Police Department and the Lee County Attorney’s Office," the release indicated.

Hinton said the forgery instruments were checks, but wouldn’t elaborate on the value assessed to the alleged thefts, as the case is still being investigated.

According to Lee County Attorney Ross Braden, McGhghy is facing five class D felonies, with each carrying a maximum five-year prison sentence, if convicted.

In addition to the 25 years potential prison penalty, Ross said the felonies also could carry restitution and fines of anywhere between $750 and $7,500 per felony. Theft of property valued at $1,000 to $10,000 is considered 2nd-degree theft in the state of Iowa. No hearing dates have been set.

McGhghy was taken to the Lee County Jail where he was booked and then bonded out on a $5,000 cash bond.

KPLAY was the group responsible for helping bring Bentley’s Playground to the city’s Tolmie Park.

A criminal charge is merely an accusation and a defendant is presumed innocent until proven guilty.

Minor injuries
Fort Madison police and rescue personnel investigate a two-vehicle accident at the intersection of Avenue H and 18th Street Wednesday afternoon. One person was taken to Fort Madison Community Hospital for observation. No other injuries were reported at the scene.

The old county shed story keeps boppin’ along

Lee County Supervisor Gary Folliu rubbed his head briskly in frustration at Tuesday’s board meeting as the county leaders worked through an issue about a maintenance shed that sits between two properties in Argyle.

The building was in disrepair about a month ago, but in the last three weeks, county maintenance officials have made repairs including boarding up a hole on one side of the building and rehanging a door that had fallen off.

Supervisors directed County Engineer Ernie Steffensmeier, who also oversees the maintenance department, to get some figures on what it would cost to build a new facility along Ambrosia Lane east of Argyle. Estimates are anywhere from $7,000, according to property owner Ron Burchett, to more than $10,000 by Steffensmeier to “re-tin” the building.

So that’s where we’re at. But how did we get here? Ron Burchett and his wife are interested in the property and they’ve indicated so at several meetings. And this...
LCHD offers lead screenings for children

LEE COUNTY - Many homes built prior to 1978 have lead paint, but the majority of homes built before 1960 have an even greater chance of having lead paint on or in them. A U.S. Census established that 51% of the homes in Iowa were built before 1960; ranking Iowa 6th in the nation. Forty-one percent (41%) of the homes in Lee County were built before 1950. Lead can be present on any painted surface but is most often found on windows, trim, door railings, columns, porches and outside walls. Surfaces that have been repainted often have lead paint underneath.

Most children are poisoned by invisible lead dust that is released when the paint is peeling, damaged or disturbed. The dust settles on floors and other surfaces. From there, it can easily get on children's hands and toys and into their mouths. Children can also be poisoned by playing in bare soil which can contain lead from paint that has peeled from the outside walls, past use of leaded gasoline and other outside sources. Scraping, sanding or otherwise disturbing the surfaces can release large amounts of toxic lead dust. It is very important to keep the dust build up to a minimum by wetting the surface before sanding or scraping, and cleaning up daily after working in an area.

The test is simple, often just a finger stick, quick and available in a doctor’s office or clinics associated with Lee County Health Department. Iowa has a law that all children must be tested before entering kindergarten but annual testing beginning at one year of age is strongly encouraged rather than waiting until 5 years of age. If a child would be poisoned the harm could be greatly reduced early on with the following:

1. Test your child (0-6 years old).
2. Watch where your children play (don’t let them play in bare soil, look for areas with grass or safe coverings)
3. Test your child (0-6 years old).
4. Call your doctor or Lee County Health Department at 319-372-5225 for more information.

LEAD PAINT HOME SAFETY TIPS

To make your home a healthy home-do the following:

1. Keep the paint in good shape (check often, watch for water damage that can make paint peel)
2. Work safely with lead paint (wet the surface before scraping, avoid creating dust or paint chips, seal off the work area, cover furniture or remove from the area, wash floors and walls with soap and water)
3. Keep home free of dust (clean window sills and floor often, have children wash hands before eating and after playing outside)
4. Watch where your children play (don’t let them play in bare soil, look for areas with grass or safe coverings)
5. Test your child (0-6 years old).

Hellige’s cross country success comes in different size

HTC junior wants to build on 2017 performance at Fort Dodge’s Kennedy Park

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON - He’s not your prototypical cross-country runner. At least not someone his size. HTC junior Matt Hellige will be running Saturday in the Class 1A state cross-country meet on Lakeside Municipal Golf Course at Kennedy Park in Fort Dodge. It’s Hellige’s second straight year at the meet after missing by two places and less than 10 seconds in his freshman year.

Hellige, who stands at 6’2” and weighs right around 185 lbs., looks like a heavy runner, but is fleet of foot as he’s won several events this year and typically finished in the top 5 in most district events this year. Hellige took 11th at the district qualifier at Iowa City Regina on Thursday.

Runners who have had Hellige’s kind of success are typically smaller and thinner and run with quicker steps. Hellige says his height lets him extend his stride without having to take as many steps, but carries extra muscle mass for the bigger frame.

“Well, like how a bigger body would help you is if you’re taller you can stride out farther and if you’re shorter it’s faster steps. Being taller means longer strides,” he said Wednesday afternoon before a 1-mile warmup. After the warm-up, Hellige did stretch drills and then ran an alternating quick mile, slow mile 4-mile run from HTC to 48th Avenue along the Bluff and back.

He said he’s looking to build on last year’s 90th place finish. He ran the course, which is mapped out to be the same course as 2017, in 18:04.4.

“I just wanna improve on my time and improve where I placed from last year. I’ve definitely tried to eat healthier and runs a couple more miles each week compared to last year in hopes of doing better this year,” Hellige said.

“We did a little more weight lifting, especially in the summer. Every other day I would go work out in a gym in Nauvoo. I wanted to develop the legs a little more. I didn’t want to necessarily get bigger, but become a stronger runner,”

Head Coach Matt Mohrfeld said Hellige has been dedicated in the off-season to getting better. He said Hellige’s kick in the last quarter mile this year has improved.

“He’ll drop under 4:45 in the last quarter mile this year, which is just savage and about a minute faster than the rest of our team’s times,” Mohrfeld said.

“When you ask about Matt’s training, he’s a little

Hellige focusing on running his best race at state

Hummel when it comes to that. What he’s done different is he’s focused on running. Running training is about a plan and he’s stuck to his plan and executed it. He’s trained smarter and more mature. If it’s a five-mile easy, it’s a five-mile easy. If it’s one mile repeats at 6:55, he hits his numbers and sticks to the plan.”

Mohrfield said Hellige’s execution during races has been better than previous years.

“He’s strategic execution in the races has been better than before. He knows what his capacity is and sticks to that. He isn’t sucked into the kid who goes out quick, and not sucked in by the group that lags back. So maturity has helped him.”

Hellige benefited from seeing some of the fastest kids in the state at the Iowa City districts. His time at districts was a half second faster than his 2017 state time, but like any outdoor sporting event, there are variables such as surface and weather conditions that can impact times.

Strictly looking at times and not course set up, condition, exact length and other variables, Hellige’s qualifying time would have been good enough for a top-five finish at the qualifiers in Guthrie Center and Cedar Rapids Kennedy. Marshalltown’s 1A qualifier had 24 runners in under 18 minutes with Madrid’s Sean McDermott, pulling the best time in the state at 16:32.8 a full 10 seconds in front of the second place runner.

Regina had the second toughest district with 10 qualifiers running in under 18 minutes with 10 qualifiers in under 18 minutes with the top runner, Hunter Rickels of Calamus-Wheatland, running a 17:10.9. The final West Sioux qualifier had nine runners in under 18 minutes. Gehlen Catholic’s Will Rodder had the best time there at 17:04.45.

Looking just at times, Hellige had the 54th best time in the state on Thursday, but Mohrfield said track-to-track numbers are inherently skewed.

“As I say, as long as they run up to their ability and give it their best, that will be their best race. And no matter what, I’m always proud of them,” he said.

“Our district is as tough as I remember it being. Pekin kids are fast and they were third and fourth to the Cal-Wheatland kids. You got a look there at some kids who are going to take some positions at state. Even though there will be more people running, the competition will not be any greater. If you look at our district qualifier, that pack didn’t break until late and he was right there battling in that pack.”

Each district takes the top 15 runners, plus all the runners from the schools that qualify as a team that didn’t qualify individually, are invited to run at the state meet. Last year there were 149 runners in Class 1A.

Hellige said he’s done a few things with nutrition and ran some different training routes, but for the most part he’s just focusing on his stride. Mohrfield said he’s become more fluid in his pace and mechanics are more in line.

“He’s style has gotten more fluid. His body isn’t as rigid and he’s firing the knee nice which drops the foot under him instead of reaching out forward. When I watch him go around the track and look at the forms, man, his form is consistent and his endurance backs his form, if that makes sense.”

Hellige said he runs to exhaustion at each race, but runs through the shoot and then recovers.

“Every race is so exhausting. Obviously I try as hard as I can and definitely get exhausted, but I think I recover very quickly,” he said.

This is also the first year the runners are allowed to wear GPS training watches on the course. Hellige said he won’t be looking at the watch very much and it shouldn’t be a distraction.

“Well, I may glance down every now and then,” he said with a smile.

The Class 1A boys run begins at 2:30 p.m. and is the last race of the day on Saturday.

Maintenance shed embarasing for all sides

From the Front

is where it gets laughable - almost. These people are serious about making the property appealing, even if that means mowing the lawn and weeding the property on their own dime.

That’s what they’ve done... for 12 years...

Laurie Burchett said the recent activity to mend the building is the most traffic we’ve seen to that building in the two years I’ve lived here and the 12 years Ron’s lived there.

Laurie told the board that over the past dozen years, residents have probably spent more than $11,000 dollars mowing and weeding the property. The other oddity is that a garden has somehow popped up on part of the property, and a dog enclosure spills onto the property.

But who owns the property? The county says it’s their property. Steffensmeier said maintenance crews haven’t tended to the mowing or weeding because they weren’t sure of the status of the Argyle Sanitary District which owned a section of the lot. You didn’t ask somebody... for 12 years? County Auditor Denise Fraise said the sanitary district has not been dissolved, and in actuality, the supervisors under a determination from former County Attorney Mike Short, are the representatives of the district, because...no one would run to sit on the sanitary district board. And those people that were written in during elections, declined to sit on the board.

Supervisor Matt Pflug, who appeared at times just as frustrated with the turn of events as Folluo, said the county will now maintain the property and asked that County Attorney Ross Braden look into the garden and dog enclosure being on the property, suggesting that will be short-lived.

So, residents have been mowing the lot for the dozen years, officially unknown to the county. One would think that after the costs got ohh... a couple hundred bucks, someone would go to the county and say, ‘Hey, I’m done mowing the lawn for free.’

Jim Noll, who was at the meeting for a different reason concerning the use of jake brakes around county neighborhoods, said the board should consider giving the property to the Burchetts as compensation for costs they’ve shoul- dered to date.

What? Did they let anyone know they were mowing the lawn? Did they have permission from anyone in the county to mow the lawn? Granted, some people do things to just be nice, but 12 years? And then when the county won’t sell you the property, you bring up the amount you’ve ‘invested’ in the property without the county’s permission or knowledge.

“What if these people were to submit a bill for $11,000?” Noll asked the board. “What would you do?”

As taxpayers wed hope the county would return the bill unpaid with a notice politely asking the Burchetts to stay off the property as the county could be exposed to insurance claims if something unfortunate were to happen.

But how can a county ‘not know’ that someone has been mowing their lawn? They’ve been able to see the building for the past 12 years. Did they see a patch of grass taller than a house sitting between two homes? According to the Burchetts no one’s been near the place in two years. Supervisors themselves have been out to the property and apparently they assumed the county was mowing and maintaining it. You have to imagine the looks on the supervisors faces when three weeks ago they were told the neighbors had been mowing the lawn for 12 years.

And what is still a little disconcerting is that Steffensmeier has been asking to build a new mainte- nance shed for at least the two years Pen City Current has been cover- ing county budget talks.

Both times the plans were nixed as a victim of budget cuts. It’s pretty clear Mr. Steffensmeier has costs to build a new maintenance building.

The one they are looking at now is probably a smaller footprint and isn’t out near West Point where he originally wanted to add the space.

The shed contains a bull- dozer that Steffensmeier claims is still functional, but he said in the winter they’ll move some rollers into the building.

We make light of it, not because it’s not important, it is. And it’s not laugable because these folks are entitled to an appealing neighborhood, and the county has a responsibility to maintain the structure and the property. On the other hand, taking care of someone else’s property in the short term due to sick- ness or temporary absence is admirable, but 12 years mowing public property without notification and then deciding to ask for the property, tongue and cheek or not, in exchange for sweat equity... we feel is just a little out of bounds.

But just a little.

Speaking of property, in case you read this but not the news we sprint after every day, Viking Cruises found a domestic builder for their longboats that, it would appear anyway, are back on track for Missis- sippi cruises. The boats would make seven-day excursions along the Mississippi River, the most relevant being a St. Louis to St. Paul run that would have stops in Hannibal, Davenport, Dubuque and, as it stands as of September 17, either Fort Madison or Burlington. The company is projecting 165,000 passengers by 2027 on the Mississippi cruises. They break that down to between 300 and 400 passengers per cruise that would make at least two stops weekly for about four hours in one of the locations that, as of yet, is undetermined.

This is fast-moving development, according to a Viking spokesperson talking to Dubuque city officials last month. This story could get very interest- ing as communities vie for docking agreements - but that’s Beside the Point.
