FORT MADISON - The Fort Madison City Council approved an application for a grant for federal funds potentially to help fund constructing a roundabout at the intersection of Hwy. 61 and 53rd Street on the west end of Fort Madison.

At Tuesday's meeting the council voted 7-0 to approve applying for the grant, but discussion focused on the cost benefit of a roundabout vs. the traditional four-way intersection.

Larry Driscoll, the city public works director, said a roundabout would cost roughly $850,000 to build, but upgrading the intersection with additional turning lanes and new traffic lights would cost roughly $1.2 million.

Concerns from public meetings about future plans for Old Highway 61 and from councilman centered around the delays north and south bound at the intersection.

"Do you feel, in general, we would spend less to do this roundabout than all the other stuff we've talked about and still have a new intersection," Councilman Chad Cangas asked.

"Correct, last year I came here with HRGreen and we gave a proposal for that intersection and it was $1.2 million for right turn lanes and new traffic lights," Driscoll said.

"The roundabout, I feel, is just a good solution to eliminate the long-term traffic lights there,"

Councilman Bob Morowitz asked what the impact would be to semi-traffic and said he could see it slowing down traffic as they work through the roundabout.

MONTROSE - Don Hunold rapped the gavel, so to speak, on his last county supervisor's meeting on Tuesday.

Hunold, a retired businessman who now farms in rural Lee County, served in his last Lee County Board of Supervisor's meeting, after not seeking re-election for another four-year term this year.

Hunold was honored with a plaque and a standing ovation from the other members on the board after adjourning the quick meeting in Montrose.

He said he feels the county is in pretty shape as far as services to its residents, and said although budgets are constantly in flux, the county's financial shape is stable.

"I think the county is financially stable and we should try to keep it that way every year regardless," Hunold said. "I think the county is in good shape with all we've done with sheriff's department and emergency preparedness and those types of services. But I think it will be a challenge next year because everybody's down in incoming revenue for whatever reason. With all the hiring that's been going on you'd think it would be the other way around."

Supervisor Rick Larkin presented Hunold with a plaque in lieu of another proposal that would show increases than 100%, eventually voting 7-0 against the increase in lieu of another proposal that would show increases more reflective of city costs.

Under the proposal put together by City Public Works Director Larry Driscoll and City Clerk Melinda Blind, services for adults would increase from $850 to $1,500 on Saturdays, a 76% increase. On Sundays and holidays, the rate would go from $950 to $2,000 an increase of 111%. Saturday services for children/infants would go from $400 to $500 and on Sundays/holidays the rate would increase from $600 to $900. Children/Infants in Babyland would go from $400 to $600 on Saturdays and $600 to $1,000 on Sundays/holidays.

Other price increases were also proposed for urn vault services. There are no current charges for those services, but on Saturday, city staff is recommending Council votes down cemetery fee increases

FORT MADISON - Several city councilman said they weren't comfortable setting cemetery fees that were intended to discourage local families from picking a weekend to bury loved one.

At Tuesday's regular meeting of the Fort Madison City Council, the council took up discussion on bumping cemetery fees in some instances more than 100%, eventually voting 7-0 against the increase in lieu of another proposal that would show increases more reflective of city costs.

State may look at creating Office of Rural Affairs

DES MOINES - Gov. Kim Reynolds this month received initial recommendations from three task forces charged with identifying needed legislative, regulatory and policy changes as part of the Governor’s Empower Rural Iowa Initiative. The governor established the initiative by executive order in July. It is co-chaired by Lt. Gov. Adam Gregg and Iowa Rural Development Council (IRDC) Chair Lt. Gov. Reynolds this month began, and I can’t wait to see how we will continue to empower rural Iowa in the future.”

“I am thankful Gov. Reynolds has made rural Iowa a priority in our administration and has entrusted me with leading the charge on this important initiative,” Lt. Gov. Gregg said. “Gov. Reynolds heard the concerns of Iowans, said. “Gov. Reynolds heard the concerns of Iowans, the needs of rural Iowa – empowerment in our small communities, and cannot be used without express written permission.

Several common themes were identified in the initial recommendations. One was to create an Office of Rural Affairs to assist with rural policy development and provide a permanent rural perspective. Another was to create a database for rural communities to share available programs, best practices and development strategies.

Specific task force recommendations include:

- Investing in Rural Iowa Task Force: Assist rural Iowa communities in obtaining housing needs assessments.
- Reform the workforce housing tax credit to make it more competitive and dedicate additional resources to the rural set-aside Growing Rural Iowa Task Force.
- Create an Empowered Rural Communities recognition program.
- Connecting Rural Iowa Task Force.
- Optimize the existing broadband grant program to ensure state funding stretches as far as possible.
- Identify a consistent source of funding for the broadband grant program.
- Reform the workforce housing tax credit to make it more competitive and dedicate additional resources to the rural set-aside Growing Rural Iowa Task Force.

The Investing in Rural Iowa Task Force, the Growing Rural Iowa Task Force and the Connecting Rural Iowa Task Force held Idea Summits in six rural locations around Iowa – Earlham, Holstein, Maquoketa, Mount Pleasant, Pella and Stanton. They considered ideas submitted by task force members and the public.

Council asks city staff to revisit cemetery fee bumps

Mohrfeld said he heard from quite a few residents after the proposed increases were reported in local news outlets. “I’m sure all of you have gotten feedback on this issue from people in town,” Mohrfeld said. “A couple of observations, I don’t know what’s driven the disrespectful amount on the Saturday. We can see we are trying to push people away on Saturday and I don’t agree that’s an appropriate use of a fee.”

Mohrfeld said the regular rates are lower than other areas and didn’t know why the city was in that position and didn’t know why the Saturday rate was so high. He said he understood an upcharge for Saturdays.

Blind said during the month of November, four of six were on Saturday and she said one of those deaths was on the Saturday the week before.

“It was a choice of convenience, more or less, to have the burial on Saturday and this gets very difficult for the limited number of workers the city has to perform these duties,” Blind said. Sara Jan Garza, of Fort Madison told the council the new rates favor the wealthy.

“What I’m hearing is if you’re rich, you can afford Saturday or Sunday, if not...tough,” she said. Mohrfeld said he would be in favor of finding the true costs of the services and set the percentage to contribute to the cost of overhead and spread that over each and every day.

“I think the cost should be the same every day, whether that be $500 or whether that be $750, I think that would be the appropriate way to go.”

David Varley, City Manager, said cemeteries are never going to pay for themselves. It’s just something we inherit and in this city we have a lot of cemeteries and it’s always going to be a money loser.

“Which ever way you guys want to go, we’ll make it work. It’s not a deal killer, we’re just trying to find ways to be a little more efficient. We thought we’d try this and if you’re not comfortable with it, we’ll try something else,” he said.

Councilman Bob Morawitz agreed that the rates should be spread out over each day of the week. “Sounds like it’s just a manpower issue, more than a budget issue. We should spread that out all the days and not just the weekends. We’re just doing this to discourage people from doing it on the weekends because we have a manpower issue,” Morawitz said.

“That’s part of it,” Driscoll said. Mayor Brad Randolph said the city should set the rates at a justifiable costs that cover the city’s costs and go from there.

“If we are able to justify or cover the costs in performing the service on a special day, I don’t think we should do a whole lot more than that. I would be more inclined to take the current $450 and current $200 and raise them all to $650 and leave the $850s on the weekends and assume the $200 difference covers the cost of my overtime,” Randolph said.

After the council rejected the fee increase, Randolph asked the city to return the discussion to the agenda at a later date with substantial changes to the structure for the council to consider again.

City tables preliminary agreement with Viking Cruises

Driscoll said it would be constructed with aprons on them that allow for the bigger turning radius needed for truck traffic.

City Manager David Varley said he’s been involved in the construction of about a dozen roundabouts and cited data that indicated they were a better way to handle intersections than traditional street lights where applicable. The City had discussed a roundabout at the Avenue H and 18th Street intersection a few years back.

“Just a quick reminder that data shows a decreased amount of time getting through the intersection about 82% and it also reduces the frequency of accidents at 73%. He said the accidents that do happen are less severe as traditional intersection accidents are usually t-bones,” he said.

“They work. I can’t think of a single downside to them.”

Councilman Chris Greenwald said when the city first discussed the roundabout for 18th Street he didn’t like the idea, but after using the one recently constructed in Burlington, he’s now on board with them.

Cangas agreed that he didn’t like change, but the roundabouts he’s encountered, he likes. The reconstructed intersection isn’t on the city’s schedule until 2023 and Driscoll said the city could amend the purpose of the grant at some point if they decided the roundabout wasn’t the way to go.

In other action, the council:

• voted to appoint Varley to the Southeast Iowa Regional Planning Commission effective Jan. 1, 2020.
• tabled a preliminary agreement with Viking Cruise lines to coordinate efforts to secure docking for the company’s future Mississippi River excursions with Fort Madison being a port of call.

Holy Trinity boys drop eight straight to start season

Crusaders wrap up first half on Friday night at Cardinal

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
POL EDITOR

FORT MADISON - A sluggish second quarter from the field is what separated Holy Trinity from an upset bid of West Burlington Tuesday night.

The Crusaders scored just four points and took just three shots in the second quarter as West Burlington ran away with a 56-42 win at Shottenkirk Gymnasium.

“That’s a really good West Burlington team, and really there’s no such thing as a moral victory, but I kinda felt like we played a pretty good game tonight,” head coach John Hellige.

Holy Trinity, which falls to 0-8 on the season, stayed within two points of the Falcons most of the way through the first period until junior Matt Hellige fouled West Burlington’s Marvion Jackson under the hoop.

The 6’5” sophomore buried both from the free throw stripe with :20 left in the period.

The Crusaders would miss three shots on the next trip down the floor and trailed 13-17 at the end of one.

Kyle Bredemeyer hit a bucket a minute into the second period to keep the deficit at four, but Jonah Marlow and Colton Sherwood would hit back-to-back 3-balls from the Falcons to take a 10 point lead. Fehske would counter with a bucket at the 2:48 mark, but the two teams would then combine for six turnovers in the final two minutes.

Jackson would score on a drop-step that got around the Holy Trinity faithful, but the Falcons would convert six straight free throws as the Crusaders down 17-27.

Out of the break, Schneider would put a foul on the Falcon’s Tanner Snodgrass who would make the free throw and then go full court on the inbounds and get an HTC’s Matt Hellige in the paint. Quentin Schneider the final two minutes.

West Burlington’s Colton Sherwood drive’s the land against HTC’s Brant Holtkamp (2) and Matt Hellige (33) in the Crusaders’ 56-24 loss Tuesday at home.

break Sherwood hit another long-ball from the top of the key to open up a 35-17 advantage.

HTC senior Brant Holtkamp would hit a three from the right baseline at the 5:33 mark that would set off a 10-0 run where Hellige would get an inside bucket sliding around Jackson in the lane, Holtkamp would hit a runner in transition and Fehske would spot up from the left wing to close the gap back to eight 27-35.

The Falcons’ senior Tanner Snodgrass broke the run with a jumper from about 12 feet. Fehske would miss on the next possession, but the Crusaders would force a turnover and Hellige would score again moving against the bigger Jackson to cut the lead again to eight 29-37. Snodgrass would score again in transition and Holtkamp and Schneider would miss in the next two trips down to lead HTC down by 10 at the end of three.

West Burlington came out hot in the third quarter outscoring the Crusaders 16-5 behind eight straight from sophomore Darian Johnson to put the Falcons up by 15 34-49 and HTC wouldn’t be able to cut into the lead. HTC did put together an 8-1 run after a Blake Crabtree 3-ball in front of the Holy Trinity faithful, but the Falcons would convert six straight free throws as Holy Trinity went into back-a-Falcon to try get some possessions.

Sherwood would bury two freebies after being fouled by Crabtree to finish the scoring at 56-42.

Matt Hellige was in double figures for the first time in three games with 13 points on the night. Head coach John Hellige said he’s been looking for more from his post.

“I challenged him during a time out. I’m like ‘Where’s the Matt from last year? We really need you to look at the basket and look to score and he took the challenge and scored better from that. We came out of the gate with such fierce competition and you go against some of these teams that have a big and you get a couple shots blocked it makes you tend to second guess yourself and wanna put in your pocket. We have to have Matt want to continue to attack the basket even though he’s undersized.”

He said it’s been tough to Fehske is struggling to find the bottom of the basket.

“They’ve been really playing red defense on him and he’s facing some tough competition and they know he’s a shooter. Sometimes good shooters just need to see the ball in the bottom of the basket to get going.”

Fehske finished with three points on the night. The junior is averaging right at 10 points per game and finished last year at 13 points per contest. Adam Rauenbueler also had eight. Schneider finished with five, while Crabtree and Holtkamp each had three and Bredemeyer finished with two.

The Crusaders travel to Cardinal to wrap up the first half of the season before the holiday break on Friday night.

Larkin said with a laugh. “When you looked it up and saw what we really make you actually said, ‘Maybe I could do that.’” and you ran and you won. It’s been a real honor to serve with you and you represented your district well.”

“Four years was interesting and I’ll tell you what, everyone should serve on this board for four years. It’s not what you thing. I think everyone on this board listens to their constituents and tries to do the best they can. You can’t always win and you don’t always lose, but I appre- ciated you folks working with me and your time.”

He said the best part of being a supervisor was get- ting to meet people in the county and trying to do what’s best for them even though it wasn’t always a win/lose proposition.

“I know we usually meet people because they have an issue, but it’s always something where you’re trying to help resolve an issue. When you’re up here and your trying to settle something that can get interesting, but you try to do what’s best for the county in our eyes.”

Several boards have approached Hunold about serving in a volunteer capacity, but he didn’t elab- orate and said he was still trying to sort out what he wants to do now.

With family in different spots across the country, traveling will be on the agenda, but Hunold still farms land in the county and he said he considers that part of the fun of retirement. He said after announcing he wasn’t going to seek re-election, which he did after discovering he had cancer, he’s had second thoughts.

“I’ve had a couple people ask me to serve on some volunteer boards, but I don’t know yet what I’m going to do. Did I have second thoughts, you always do, Maybe I should have done it again, but four years is a long time and kind of eats you up a bit. I have children kind of all over the place and I like to travel. And I had cancer and I whipped it. That changes your thinking a little bit. A guy can’t be here forever,” he said. “I just told myself I would shoot for one term and see what life brings and make that decision four years after — and that’s exactly what I did.”

His advice to Rich Har- low, who won the general election to take his place on the board, and for the other board members was to continue to listen to the people of the county. He encouraged the incom- ing board to listen to all sides of the issues and sort out all the noise that can shroud opinions.

“I know a lot of people in the county and I’ve listened to a lot of people. I wanted to make sure I didn’t miss something and that’s pretty easy to do.”

Harlow will join the board at it’s Wed. Jan. 2 meeting at the North Lee County Courthouse where new officers will be selected.

Lee County Super- visor Don Hunold accepts a plaque from current board member Rick Larkin at Tuesday morning’s meeting. It was Hunold’s last day of a four- year term on the board.
