P.A.W. locates escaped dog

FORT MADISON – Local animal officials have caught a large German Shepherd that escaped from the PAW Animal Shelter during last weekend’s storm. PAW Director Sandy Brown said the animal is from a puppy mill and had not had much interaction with people, so it was frightened.

Brown and local law enforcement officials asked for residents’ help in locating the animal, but warned that trying to catch the animal might have caused him to run and that could have expanded the area of search, so she asked people to call sightings into PAW.

Reports of the animal came in from the areas of Aztec Trailer Park, AutoZone, and as far west as the bypass at Hwy. 2 after Brown made her plea.

Brown “had people text me at 3 a.m. and that’s fine,” she said while making her plea.

The dog was located sometime Sunday afternoon, Brown reported, although it is not known where he was found.

Go around the pile

No, the snow isn’t blocking the Fort Madison Subway restaurant at 20th and Avenue L Saturday afternoon, but a 12-foot pile in the parking lot looks like it’s blocking out the building from 20th Street.

Downtown Ave. G rehab set to begin mid-April

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG

FORT MADISON – A $1.5 million project to put in new sidewalks and curbing, and improve stormwater drainage on Avenue G downtown, is getting closer to becoming a reality.

At Tuesday’s City Council meeting, a spokeswoman from HR Green, Inc. out of Cedar Rapids, said the company, under contract with the city, is putting the project out for bids.

According to Teresa Staleman, the project manager for HR Green, the city has $1.55 million to spend on the project, but current engineering estimates have a three-block section from 7th to 10th streets at $1.45 million and another one-block section at roughly $425,000.

The project will put in new sidewalks, curbing, permeable pavers, and storm water enhancements along the north and south sides of Avenue G.

The funding source comes from the interest that would have been paid to the state on loans taken out to rehab the city’s waste water treatment plant. So instead of paying interest on those loans, the city can use $1.55 million of that interest to fund the project.

Staleman said the bids for the project will go out in February and then come back to the council for review. The council would then select and approve a bid, hold a public hearing, and then go to construction by mid-April and be done before Thanksgiving.

City Councilman Bob Morawitz told a group of business and property owners at a Riverfront Business District meeting on Thursday construction will involve tearing up one block and then moving to the next block and start tarring it up for the improvements. While the second block is being torn up, crews will rehab the block.

Students artwork on display at FMAAAA in January

BY BRIAN RIGGS
FMAAA Director

FORT MADISON – January means kids’ art at FMAAAA gallery with the Annual Budding Artist Exhibition. This feature is over a decade strong now so had to do some digging. However, it is an official record. There are over 650 examples of art from the students of Central Lee, Holy Trinity, and Ft. Madison Public. The hanging has been literally days in the making and is just culminating today. I must say quite a mother load and a challenge to keep an important concept to this show…inclusion. Needless to say all available real estate has been taken in the feature gallery. Farmers Savings Bank is in the sponsor for this annual fan favorite.

There are over 60+ examples of kindergarten works. Do believe kids are little more advanced from when this writer began the school system. Eye spy the balancing elephants, rainbow painted owls, and tree torn paper collages from Central Lee. First grade Holy Trinity students balance their works with largescale gracefully painted ballerinas. First grade Lincoln and Richardson students paired their visual elements with written statements. Third graders undertook responsibly conscious printmaking paired with cooperative themed logo cards displayed in trading card format, while third grade Holy Trinity ate at the feeder with mixed media birds of a feather. Central Lee elementary has many circus-themed projects with first grade spot lit clowns, second grade animal crackers, fifth grade movable circus animals, and sixth grade ceramic performance animals. Let the show go on!

Middle school students at FMMSS have one instructor specializing in 3D and the other in 2D. 2D includes Picasso portraits, reflections prints, color scheme paint-grade ceramic performance animals. Let the show go on!

Project will reduce number of light poles on Avenue G

that had been torn up previously, and that the project will cycle like that throughout the construction.

Larry Driscoll said the work will not include street lighting and Alliant will provide lighting at street corners only.

He said two lights will be on the opposite sides of each corner with trees on the adjacent corners.

Councilman Rusty Andrews said by eliminating street lights in the middle of the blocks, they may save money, but the city is paying for that now, so why not continue that level of lighting.

Driscoll said the city would have to put the nodes back in the middle of the blocks and said that could interfere with the drainage system that was the reason the money became available.

"Shut the street lights off and see how dark it is down there, I can't imagine the money became available.

"We're fairly confident we can do three of the four blocks for under the $1.55 million," she said.

In other action, the council approved a 6-0 vote the sale of property at 1136 Avenue H, to MM Real Estate, LLC for $13,500. Rusty Andrews abstained. Councilman Matt Mohrfeld voted in favor of the sale, but acknowledged that the property was being sold to his nephew, Michael Mohrfeld.

approved 7-0 to go out for bids and schedule a public hearing to do a bridge deck overlay on the 14th Street bridge over French Creek.

approved 7-0, to have HR Green take over the Geographical Information Systems for the city at a cost not to exceed $43,500.

appointed Carol Foss to the city's Tourism Commission, Jerry Hamelton to the city's Board of Adjustment and Appeals, and Robert Cochran to the Old Fort Commission, all with unanimous votes.

Staleman said at this point, engineers have eliminated all the things they can and still retain the funding.

"We're fairly confident we can do three of the four blocks for under the $1.55 million," she said.

In other action, the council:

approved a 6-0 vote the sale of property at 1136 Avenue H, to MM Real Estate, LLC for $13,500.

approved Carol Foss to the city's Tourism Commission, Jerry Hamelton to the city's Board of Adjustment and Appeals, and Robert Cochran to the Old Fort Commission, all with unanimous votes.
