Lee County Sheriff Stacy Weber, center, and Fort Madison City Manager David Varley, to his right, talk with the Lee County Board of Supervisors Tuesday morning about a proposed deal for the Sheriff’s Department to fill in as interim Police Chief of Fort Madison.

Varley appeared to sway two votes. Fort Madison Police Chief Tim Sittig announced his resignation effective May 31. Sittig wasn’t at Tuesday’s City Council meeting. That announcement prompted Varley and Weber to work up a proposal where the city would pay roughly $50,000 for six months compensation for staff, most likely Burch, to oversee the department. However the city won’t be paying a chief salary so most of that money is allocated in the budget.

Supervisors delay solar project decision a week

MONTROSE – The Lee County Supervisors have pushed action on potentially adding solar panels to three buildings next week’s meeting, but several officials are getting impatient with the continued discussion.

At Tuesday’s regular meeting, two electrical companies, Mohrfeld Electric of Fort Madison and Precision Energy Services out of Burlington were on hand to answer any additional questions supervisors may have had about the two firms’ proposals.

Mohrfeld originally pitched the idea to supervisors back in April. Mohrfeld has done similar projects in the county with Southeastern Community College’s Keokuk campus and Holy Trinity Catholic High School.

Under the proposal, Mohrfeld would essentially pay for the installation of the panels and hooking up the power and then the county would pay reduced electric rates per a purchase power agreement back to Mohrfeld’s. The proposal would also include some upgrades to lighting.

Precision, then came into the picture last week and made a pitch to the supervisors as well touting similar savings and union laborers.

Under the terms of the PPAs the majority of the county’s electric bill would be paid to Mohrfeld under a deal.

Lee County defers to city on police chief deal

MONTROSE – A proposed deal to allow a Lee County Sheriff’s Department captain to serve as interim Fort Madison Police Chief will have to wait at least one more week.

Lee County Supervisors discussed the proposal with Fort Madison City Manager David Varley, Lee County Sheriff Stacy Weber and County Attorney Ross Braden at Tuesday’s regular meeting. Also in attendance, but without comment, were Lee County Sheriff’s Department Chief Deputy Will Conlee and Captain Craig Burch, both of whom could be involved in the operations at the Fort Madison PD if the agreement is approved.

However, the supervisors only had the item on for discussion so no action was taken, much to the surprise of Weber, who thought action was going to be taken at the meeting. But several supervisors hedged on taking any action before the agreement was voted on by Fort Madison City Council.

The City Council approved the measure by a 5-2 vote after an impassioned commentary from City Manager David Varley as he appealed to sway two votes.

15-year Power Purchase Agreement. Mohrfeld would also warranty the new equipment. Through Precision, the bills would be paid back to an investment group Econergy out of Washington D.C.

The proposal would put solar panels on top of Keokuk’s Department of Human Services building, the North Lee County Office Building and a battery of panels at the Lee County Conservation Building.

Mohrfeld’s plan would include a set at the LCCD that could rotate on a pedestal to capture more sun. Precision’s would be a fixed bank at that location.

“Theirs would be a tracking system, that I’m not going to lie, is going to have curb appeal. It’s more efficient but it has slower return. It doesn’t perform like a fixed mount system does,” Mohrfeld said.

Precision’s Brian Fleming said the fixed mount would be cheaper just because it doesn’t have as many moving parts.

Supervisors Ron Fedler and Rick Larkin said the work should stay in the county—cause Mohrfeld has a proven track record and Mohrfeld brought the idea to the county.

“Mohrfeld took the initiative to come out here and took the initiative to make the original presentation and everything. And it was only after everyone else read it in the papers that they decided they wanted to put a bid in. At least that’s what I’ve been told,” Larkin said.

“The longer we let this go the more and more and more companies are gonna want to make presentations. I think it’s time we make a decision and I think we should put this on the agenda for next week,” Larkin said.

Precision’s proposal also included solar panels on the jail, but Mohrfeld said their math was wrong and the building’s rating couldn’t be dropped enough considering the amount of electricity being consumed. Precision said the system would have to include LED lighting which would reduce the demand to 20,000 units per month, but Mohrfeld said the math was not right and they had to stay below 20,000 units per month for 12 months of the year.

“There’s no way your going to make enough sun in December to pull this building out of demand. I’m sorry, but you’re math is way off.”

Lee County Attorney Ross Braden said because there is no out of pocket expense to the county, the project doesn’t fall under the county’s bid codes and the firm could be approved hiring two seasonal employees for the Lee County Conservation District.

Reynolds inks forestry hauling bill

LEE COUNTY – Gov. Kim Reynolds signed legislation Monday that will allow forestry haulers to exceed weight limits on state and county roads when hauling logs and other forestry products.

Counties and their respective engineers have opposed Senate File 629 in many different forms as it exceeds bridge weight limits and could pose safety risks and cause extended financial burdens on county budgets.

Lee County Engineer Ben Hall said he hadn’t heard the bill had been signed by the governor, but said he was disappointed in the new law.

“I guess I would say I’m disappointed but this is an improvement over previous versions. Our lobbying made a difference in that the bill she signed has a provision in it for statewide permitting that will at least allow for a check of the safety of local bridges,” Hall said Monday.

“But it’s very vague in how it will work. I think it requires them to consult with us, but doesn’t give us any say in how it will be implemented.”

Hall said that language focuses solely on the bridges, but he said the bill will take a heavy toll on county and state roads throughout the state.

“This is another unfunded mandate in that our infrastructure has to now support heavier loads with no compensation to shore up our roads and bridges.”

Hall said the bill was a special interest bill for the logging industry, but he said next year he wouldn’t be surprised if other industries, such as construction, see the state classifying loads of logs as “indivisible” and request their own weight limit extensions.

“Next year all these other industries would be looking for similar allowances,” Hall said.

Lee County Supervisor Chair Gary Folluo said he doesn’t see a lot of forestry and logging trucks on county roads, but he’s more concerned of the opening of the restrictions, as Hull had eluded to.

“I think it’s a shoe horn into other areas,” Folluo said. “How do they deny that, if they already done this. Once you approve it for one person, they’re all going to come to the table. This poses a serious problem for county infrastructure.”

Hull also the bill also will hit some counties in the pocket book as the fee structure changes from a $400 annual county permit to a $175 statewide permit.

“It’s taking money away from us in the same swoop,” he said.

“If a logging truck wanted to get a permit from us for an annual overweight permit we would get $400 annually. This reduces that to $175 for a statewide permit. They said the counties will get some cut of that, but are they going to divide it among all 99 counties? We used to get $400 for that and now we’ll get some fraction of a $175.

The bill allows the forestry industry to exceed the limit because the state reclassified their loads at indivisible, or they can’t be broken down, so they are granted heavier weight allowances.

Bloodhounds show spunk in twinbill with BHS

FORT MADISON — It took Fort Madison’s baseball team seven games last season to score 16 runs.

Monday night during the Bloodhounds’ season-opening double header against Burlington at Fort Madison High School, the Hounds scored a combined 17 runs over the course of nearly two games.

Fort Madison dropped the first game of the double header 11-7 to the Grayhounds, before rebounding and owning a 10-2 lead heading into the sixth inning in game two.

Mother Nature wouldn’t allow the full seven innings to be played in the second contest with the rain putting the game on hold. Depending on both team’s schedules, the game may or may not be finished with the two innings extra needed to be played.

“We’ll see if we can find a makeup date and if we can’t, we’ll just call it a final,” Fort Madison Head Coach Ron Walker said. “The state wants us to play a full seven if we can.”

The Bloodhounds didn’t get the start they had hoped for in game No. 1, as they trailed Burlington 9-0 heading into the bottom of the fourth inning.

Fort Madison used a bit of small ball to its advantage in the home half of the fourth. Jace Burgher started the inning getting hit by a pitch from Mason Fort. Landes Williams followed by grounding into a fielder’s choice, Williams followed by grounding into a fielder’s choice, before Brandon Reichelt followed with a single. Vasin Thurman then walked to load the bases with no outs.

The boost in moral was short lived however, as Burgher wasted no time the next at bat, sending the ball to left field for an RBI single. Williams collected back-to-back outs before an error allowed the runners on the corners for the Hounds with no outs.

Johnson popped one up on the infield on a 2-1 count for the second out of the inning with the bases still loaded. With the top of the lineup coming back to the plate, Cordray hit a hard line drive to left field for a bases clearing double, bringing Fort Madison to within 11-5.

Vasin Thurman went on to walk before Jordyn Gerdes struck out looking to end the fourth.

The Bloodhounds shut down Burlington to start the fifth before the bats came alive. Junior Reed Fehseke reached on an error by the Grayhound second baseman before Brandon Reichelt followed with a single. Vasin Thurman then walked to load the bases with no outs.

Burgher wasted no time the next at bat, sending the first pitch to left field for an RBI single. Williams collected another double after, but Reichelt was pegged at the plate on a stellar throw from the centerfield for the force out.

Gerdes responded for Fort Madison in the bottom of the sixth, starting the home half of the inning off with a single, moving Williams to third in the process. Senior Dayne Cordray went down on strikes before Burgher wasted no time the next at bat, sending the first pitch to left field for an RBI single. Williams collected another double after, but Reichelt was pegged at the plate on a stellar throw from the centerfield for the force out.

Johnson popped one up on the infield on a 2-1 count for the second out of the inning with the bases still loaded. With the top of the lineup coming back to the plate, Cordray hit a hard line drive to left field for a bases clearing double, bringing Fort Madison to within 9-5.

Johnson popped one up on the infield on a 2-1 count for the second out of the inning with the bases still loaded. With the top of the lineup coming back to the plate, Cordray hit a hard line drive to left field for a bases clearing double, bringing Fort Madison to within 9-5.

The Bloodhounds collected back-to-back outs before an error allowed a second run to score, putting the Grayhound lead at 11-5.

Gerdes responded for Fort Madison in the bottom of the sixth, starting the home half of the inning off with a double. Fehseke followed with a single, putting runners on the corners for the Hounds with no outs. The next two batters went down on strikes before Burgher regrouped the offense with a single, bringing in Gerdes for the final run of the game.

Gerdes stroked a single in the bottom of the seventh.

FMHS’s Garrett Hannum slides back into first on a pick-off attempt Tuesday night by Burlington High School’s Matt Fort. Hannum was safe on the play but the Hounds dropped the opener of a twinbill 11-7.

The second game was called in the sixth due to rain with FMHS up 10-2.

for the lone hit between the two teams in the inning, as Burlington went on to win by the final of 11-7.

Gerdes was saddled with the loss for the Bloodhounds, tossing 3 2/3 innings on 76 pitches. Gerdes struck out three and allowed seven hits for nine earned runs.

“‘You’ve got to tip your hat to Burlington, they put some balls in play,” Walker said. “They hit some line drives down the hole, that’s just part of the game.”

“We won the last four innings of the baseball game. That’s all we try to do is win one inning at a time, one pitch at a time and pretty soon it’s a W. We’ll take the positives and we’ve got a little bit of energy going into this next game.”

That energy was in full effect during game two, especially in the bottom of the third inning.

Cordray’s pitching was dominant in game two, recording six strikeouts through three innings. The help from the mound allowed Fort Madison to grab a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the second inning. Vasin Thurman started the inning off with a walk. Williams also drew a walk putting runners on first and second for Fehseke.

Fehseke delivered with a single, loading the bases for Johnson. Johnson singled, bringing in Vasin Thurman for the first run of the game. Back-to-back outs on the Hounds ended the second, but Fort Madison now had its first lead in a game on the season.

After Burlington’s Jacob Hardy started out the third with a line out, Taylor Bunton brought the heart of the Grayhounds order back to the plate, collecting a double. Drake Parks followed with a single, scoring Bunton and tying the game at one. Burlington strung together a single and a walk, but again Cordray got his team out of the jam with strikeouts, leaving the game knotted at one.

That’s when Fort Madison had its biggest inning of the season and one that will be hard to replicate again.

Weber would use captain to oversee
FMPD in interim

The agreement would also offer a small stipend and a backfill payment for the difference in pay between a captain's pay and anyone who has to step up to fill in for Burch. Varley said the interim period would be a good time for an objective look at the department.

"Now's a good chance to get a few months for somebody on the outside to look in and I think that's good for an organization once in while to have somebody like that come in," Varley said.

"I have a lot of faith they would do a good job." Supervisor Gary Folluo asked if Varley would consider a 3-month agreement and the re-evaluate to see how the agreement is working.

"That's certainly a fair way to go," Varley said.

Weber said it's no secret that there's been some struggles in the police department.

"We've asked that they have some detectives and work some heavier, more serious cases and those things haven't been done," Weber said. "Because of that, the resources to work cases for the city. So quite frankly, the county attorney has asked my department to allocate the 15 months worth of investigations that we've been doing it anyway."

"There have been some significant problems that I've seen as far as major cases specifically," he said.

"It's been about a year now that I spoke with Mr. Varley and Mayor (Brad) Randolph about some various specific cases, one at least in which I called in the sheriff to assist. And that turned into a big jurisdictional issue between me and the chief at that time, which was unfortunate to see considering the subject matter of that particular case." Braden said in dealing with Keokuk there hasn't been a need to involve the sheriff due to the existing command structure and the fact that they have their own investigative division.

"I'm very appreciative of Mr. Varley at this point in time at looking to do what's best for Fort Madison Police Department and to evolve by going to Sheriff Weber," Braden said.

"I think he has the best opportunity to model the ship and look at their existing structure and model that ship after what Stacy runs here at the Sheriff's department."
