Thurmans, Avery get wins at state

Extended break hurts Thurmans’ chances at Saturday play

WATERLOO – Sam Avery had about as tough a path to try and place at the Iowa State Tennis Tournament as any unseeded player in the draw. But the senior from Holy Trinity did Fort Madison proud as he went up against two of the top four singles players in Class 1A in the state before bowing out in the second round of consolation play Friday.

Avery, who qualified for the first time this year, also got into the second round of consolation play but lost in a late afternoon match to end his high school playing time.

He entered the tournament unseeded as West Burlington/Notre Dame’s Travis Wills upset him in the finals of district play two weeks ago. The state ranks the top four players against some of the best doubles teams in the state, but came up short against some of the best doubles teams in the state, but came up short.

The toughest loss came at the hands of Denison-Schleswig’s Sean Moran and Colin Reis.

The twins dropped the first set in the 13th game after giving up a 6-5 lead. After the Bloodhounds broke serve to go up 6-5, Vasin Thurman hit a rifle down the left lane that just missed, allowing Moran and Reis to break back and tie it at 6.

The two from Denison then almost blanked the Thurmans in the tiebreaker going up 6-1 in the first to seven point match. They trailed 1-2 after a Jason Thurman serve was returned long and then had a 13th game after giving up a 6-5 lead.

Twins just miss playing Saturday

WATERLOO – Jason and Vasin Thurman are just shots away, literally, from an eventual medal at the Iowa State Doubles Tennis tournament. The two sophomores from Holy Trinity Catholic, who play in the Fort Madison High School’s shared tennis program, ran into about three tiebreakers against some of the best doubles teams in the state, but came up short Friday in the second round of consolation play.

Fort Madison a big city to country boy

I’m From Dallas City, Ill, so I knew where Fort Madison was and could actually navigate the city with relative ease. What I could not do however, was tell you how good the football team was, how the baseball team was looking, or who was all going out for the basketball squad this season.

Some of those questions I still can’t answer due to those seasons being so far away (I’m still working on meeting with the coaches), but what I can tell you is what I have seen from Fort Madison High School and the surrounding community has made me feel more excited than ever before for what the future holds.

Coming from rural Illinois, we had a football field surrounded by corn fields and basketball gyms that can only seat a quarter or so of what a 3A Iowa school can. So imagine my shock walking into Fort Madison High School and getting greeted by the bronze Bloodhound. Or walking into the cafeteria and seeing professionally hand drawn photos of each athlete that has made it to the state tournament for Fort Madison. Or when I walked into Baxter Sport Complex to realize the Hounds had some of the nicest facilities in the state to play on. (I know not all sports get played at Baxter, but still.)

The list of reasons why I was left in awe goes on and on, but still, going from Class 2A in rural Illinois to Class 3A in Iowa, I’ve seen a significant difference in talent level and the size of the schools’ facilities. Just yesterday I had the privilege of working from the friendly confines of Bracewell Stadium in Burlington, a place that initially had me feeling like I was attending a professional game.

When I was first asked about the prospect of covering Fort Madison sports, I didn’t know what to think. I had covered Hancock County sports (Illini West, West Hancock, Southeastern) for nearly four years and didn’t really know how I would adjust to a “bigger city.” I put bigger city in quotations because I realize many reading this will scoff at the notion that Fort Madison resembles anything close to that of a big city. But let me tell you, for a rural (somewhat) country boy,

Keokuk man killed in motorcycle crash

FROM RADIO KEOKUK STAFF

FORT MADISON - The Iowa State Patrol has announced that a motorcycle accident that occurred Thursday at roughly 10:30PM in central Lee County claimed the life of a Keokuk man.

According to the report, 46 year old Roy Lee Dorsey of Keokuk was travelling southbound on Highway 61 at mile marker 19 when his motorcycle dropped off of the east shoulder and struck the east guardrail.

The Lee County Sheriff’s Office, Des Moines Township Fire, and Montrose EMS arrived at the scene and Dorsey was transported via ambulance to Fort Madison Community Hospital and scanner traffic shows an AirEvac Helicopter was originally called.

Dorsey was pronounced dead at Fort Madison Community Hospital as a result of his injuries.

At this time the single motorcycle accident is still under investigation and any further information will be announced when it is made public.

Seems FMHS sports on are on the rise

Fort Madison is the big time.

After a month into working for Pen City Current, my mood about making the leap across the river has changed drastically. I now know the significance of the Big Blue Oval at Drake. I now know to bring gnat spray with me to Bracewell Stadium. And most importantly, I now know that I may be out of my comfort zone in a bigger market, but the opportunities and places you get to see and cover while in the bigger market really helps to broaden horizons. That goes for both those covering the athletics and the athletes themselves.

Whether or not the Fort Madison community or its athletes feel their town is “big time,” just know that this small-town boy is proud to cover the Bloodhounds and looks forward to the many programs’ continued success.

I’ve heard there hasn’t been a lot of success from Bloodhound athletics in the past few years, but from what I’ve witnessed in my short time in the area, Fort Madison High School athletics is on the rise. And whether they realize it or not, these “big city” athletes have a much greater chance of broadening their horizons on these bigger stages. Hopefully many of those involved in athletics get the chance to broaden their horizons even more past high school whether that be going on to a bigger college, moving to another country or provide local news coverage to an area they are completely unfamiliar with. #BrickByBrick

Avery: “I was playing my best tennis”

Moon took the first game on serve in a match played indoors because of a temperamental weather pattern, but Avery was able to knot it up after scoring a point from the ad court. But then Moon would rip off five straight, breaking Avery’s serve at games 3 and 5 for a 6-1 first set win. But Avery was in each game other than a love game at 3-1 for Moon.

In game five, Avery had Moon at ad-out, but the junior from Alleman showed why he’s the second best player in the state in Class 1A, flashing down a blistering forehand and then a blistering backhand from Avery to win the point and the game when Avery missed an overhead in the front court.

Unforced errors were the theme for Avery in the second set with Moon again going up 2-0 quickly. Avery would get his only game on a 40-0 service win that included the missed ace of the service win that included Avery’s serve again in the match. Moon would break the only ace of the set.

Moon would break Avery’s serve at games two, four, five and six. Avery would get Moon again going up 2-0 in the second set with the theme for Avery missing an overhead point and the game when Avery missed an overhead to win the second set to 5-3, but Avery would break when a let cord fell on Avery’s side to take the first set to 5-3, but Avery would finish the set with an overhead at 40-30 in the sixth game.

The second set would be much the same style of play, but Avery couldn’t shake Sturm until 4-3 when an overhead bounced over Sturm’s head for a game point and a 5-3 lead. Avery would win the next game on serve for the match.

Avery’s first match with Zach Wingert of Le-Mar, who was upset in the second round of the championship bracket by unseeded Jack Edwards of Pella. The match went very much the same ways as Avery’s first match with Avery knotting the score at 1-all on serve in the first set. The match was still on serve at 2-3 and then Wingert broke Avery’s serve to go up 4-2 and take some of the energy from Avery.

Wingert would win 40-love on his next service game to go up 5-2 and then would break Avery in the eighth game to take the set. The Bloodhound got down 0-4 after an unforced error at the net off a Wingert running backhand cost Avery the game. Wingert would double fault at 30-40 in game five to give Avery his first game of the set and he seemed to find some rhythm from there taking the next game moving Avery from side to side and then ripping a backhand down to Wingert’s right that got through to cut the lead to 2-4.

Avery would break serve to close the gap to 3-4, but Avery failed to consolidate and Wingert would break right back to put him one game from the match. He ended Avery’s run in the next game on serve.

“With Moon and Wingert, they’re gonna return every single ball and if it’s a point, it’s because you hit a better shot. With Moon I think he hit long maybe one time in the whole match. It was insane,” Avery said.

“My goal since I was a freshman was just to get to state in either doubles or singles and it means a lot to be able to finally get here as a senior.”

Bloodhound Sam Avery watches a forehand drop shot clear the net in his first round loss to #2 seeded Evan Moon of North Polk Alleman Friday at the Black Hawk Tennis Center in Waterloo.
sports

Thurmans play tight matches in both losses

then Denison took the next four points to lead 6-1. Fort Madison would score the next point, but Moran and Reis would win in the next rally for the set. Jason and Vasin regrouped and blew through the next set giving up only one game in a 6-1 rout and had all the momentum going into the first-to-ten superbreaker.

But an unusually long break of almost 10 minutes between the second set and the upcoming tiebreaker seemed to clear the twins’ momentum as they dropped the tiebreaker 4-10 to end their season.

“Taking that break in between the 2nd and 3rd set took some momentum away from us. We didn’t want to that long of a break, but it’s just however long they want basically,” Jason said.

The two played in one of the first matches of the day at the tournament, but were forced to play indoors due to a fickle Mother Nature that couldn’t make up her mind, causing play to be indoors, then outdoors, back indoors, and finally outdoors for good after about 11:30.

The Hounds found themselves up against a couple of freshman from Cedar Rapids Xavier in Brady Horstmann and Hugh Corter. The first set was a nailbiter with the two teams exchanging points and games throughout. But the Saints were able to get up 6-5 and take the first set on the next game.

Fort Madison’s duo couldn’t seem to find the momentum and had some trouble hitting into the yellow lights of the Black Hawk Tennis Center.

“We just kept giving them some easy shots and playing in the indoor courts was different, the yellow lights and the yellow ball was different. If they lobbed it up, it was hard to make out the ball against those yellow lights,” Vasin said.

The two then ran up against Spencer’s Marcus Klemme and Grant Carpenter and got in sync quickly, taking the first set 6-2 breaking three Spencer service games, and winning their own serves regularly at 40-love and 40-15.

The Tigers made somewhat a match of it in the second set keeping within a game of the Thurmans at 4-3 and 5-4. In the 10th game, Vasin hit a lob that got away from Reis in the back court, and then the Hounds put the match away two points later to earn the second round against Denison.

“We played decent today, but we could have played better. The first game we played – the other team was better than us, we could have beat them, but they were just better than us. The last game match we were just not mentally focused in the first set or the tiebreaker,” Jason said.

Head Coach Dean Hogan said the third match, the boys lost some steam and energy in the tiebreaker.

“These boys came up here and played well. The twins, they had the momentum, but they just lost their legs in that tiebreaker in the final match. They just got tired,” Hogan said.

The two qualified last year as freshman and didn’t win a match, but have set a goal to finish in the top five next year. A win in that tiebreaker would have put them one win from a guaranteed top eight on Saturday.
