Volunteers help prepare for Tuesday’s inaugural cruise

American Cruise’s first ship will arrive Tuesday morning to a spruced up park, downtown

FORT MADISON – About 50 community-minded volunteers put in some sweat equity Monday morning to help pretty up the riverfront and downtown areas in anticipation of American Cruise Lines’ inaugural landing Tuesday morning.

Savanna Collier, the Fort Madison Chamber of Commerce coordinator, said she was extremely pleased with the work that was accomplished in just three hours from 9 a.m. to noon.

As a treat, American Cruise Lines, who found landing Tuesday morning, Collier said about 100 passengers have signed up to stay.

The first cruise ship is planned to dock on the city’s pier on the western side of the park at 8 a.m. Tuesday for a six-hour stay.

Collier said about 100 passengers have signed up for one of two excursions. “One is a historical excursion and the other will be an agri-tour and, right now, they’re pretty evenly split at 49 and 50,” she said.

“Some of the people, as of right now, will do the shuttle system and visit downtown. We’ve contracted with Southeast Iowa Regional Planning to use SEIBUS for that and it will do a loop from the Fort to the pavilion, and to the museum and the depot, and will have two stops along Avenue C.”

The cruise line has 14 stops planned in Fort Madison yet this year and will increase that to at least 30 per year going forward.

Volunteers spread out throughout Riverfront Park and the downtown district throughout the morning. Collier said most of the targeted items the Chamber had listed out were accomplished. But she said she hopes it’s a spark for building and business owners who saw the volunteer work being done.

“I definitely think it went well … very well. I’m extremely pleased with everyone’s hard work and this was not easy work, but it absolutely needed to be done,” she said.

“Mr. Rohloff in here, but also the man has put my mind at ease. I feel good about having you here.”

FM City Councilman

Councilman Chad Cangas said he was “extremely skeptical” of the city going outside the department and services are still quite necessary and I hope to be able to capitalize on that.”

Collier’s decision to pull internal candidates from a final pool of six that were selected after interview panels, when narrowing the field to three, drew some reaction from current department staff and former police Chief Sam Lozano.

FORT MADISON – The Fort Madison Police Department will see its fourth police chief in as many years after city officials approved the hiring of a former Wisconsin sheriff to lead the department.

The Fort Madison City Council approved the recommendation by City Manager David Varley to hire Mark Rohloff of Monroe, Wis. with an unanimous 7-0 vote.

Rohloff is the third police chief in a row that has been hired from outside the department, but he said after being hired, now is the time to tap into the resources of the current department and build relationships.

“Making sure that these people understand that even though they were not selected for the post, they are still considered very valuable to the city. Their knowledge and background and services are still quite necessary and I hope to be able to capitalize on that.”

The Fort Madison City Council approved the search for its new police chief this past Monday, but they approved the search to continue.

City Manager David Varley said he was “very interested in going from within the department and build relationships.”

Historian tells of Keokuk’s role in Civil War

Eckers tells of Keokuk’s and Iowa’s significance as a military strategic point on Mississippi

By Colin Magnuson
Radio Keokuk News Director

KEOKUK – As part of their regular educational programming, the Keokuk Public Library hosted Minnesota native and American History author Michael Eckers to discuss the role Keokuk played in the Civil War.

“The Civil War was not about railroads, it was about rivers.” That was the message from Owatonna, Minnesota native Michael Eckers to more than 30 Keokuk residents that visited the Keokuk Public Library Tuesday night to learn about the impact this area had on the Civil War more than 150 years ago.

Eckers has become a renowned author of American History as he’s currently finishing up his eighth book with three of his books pertaining not only to the Civil War but the role Midwesterners played in that conflict. After serving in the U.S. Navy during the Vietnam War, Eckers became a postmaster in the U.S. Postal Service for several decades before indulging himself in his love for American history.

Tuesday’s discussion centered on the Civil War and specifically the role Keokuk, the city, as well as its residents took part in. Michael Eckers explained that Iowa had a very significant role that it played in the western theater of the war, which Eckler described as “anywhere west of North Carolina”.

Rivers played such a pivotal role in the Civil War because they allowed one-way traffic from North to South at almost no cost. Iowa is home to a vast number of rivers as was displayed by the very first slide that Eckers showed which was a map of Iowa with all of its rivers and tributaries.

As such, Keokuk was a huge hub for the Union during the war due to the fact that it is the southernmost point of the state and it also sits along North America’s premier waterway; the Mississippi River. Eckers explained that more than 80,000 soldiers from throughout Iowa were staged at some point in Keokuk as they were shipped off to the various western fronts of the war which represented a vast majority of the total number of soldiers the state supplied.

Eckers broke his explanation of Keokuk figures and landmarks down into various slides to which he highlighted for the role they played in the war.

Estes House

“The Estes House was commandeered by the U.S. Government in 1862, shortly after the Civil War began, when fighting began out west. At about the junction of 136 & Hwy 81 there are a number of old buildings, near the junction of the Mississippi River and Iowa River, which was the western edge of Iowa at the time. again. “I think some of the issues were addressed by Daviv prior to getting Mr. Rohloff in here, but also the man has put my mind at ease,” Councilman Chad Cangas said.
“I feel good about having you here.”
Mayor Brad Randolph said Rohloff’s credentials speak for themselves and commended Varley on the search process and handling of the interim.
“We appreciate him considering our community and making it a part of his own,” Randolph said.
“And, David, I think you did a great job in the process and bringing this full circle, as well as handling the interim situation. I think that’s worked out very well.”
Councilman Chris Greenwald said he would like to see this decision going forward being left in the hands of the City Manager and not need council approval. Current city code indicates the City Manager can make the appointment, subject to City Council approval.
Rohloff has 40 years experience in law enforcement including a seven year stint at Brodhead Police Department, 13 months of which he served as interim police chief; five years with the Janesville Police Dept. as a patrolman; 21 years with the Monroe Police Department as a lieutenant before receiving a Governor’s appointment to fill a vacancy in the Green County Sheriff’s Office, all in Wisconsin.
He served in that capacity overseeing a staff of 70
until his term expired on Jan. 1 of this year.

He did his law enforcement academy training at Blackhawk College in Janesville, Wisconsin and the attended the Northwestern School of Police Staff & Command in 2008. He’s also served with the United States Air Force and the Wisconsin National Guard.
He said his policing is all about teamwork.
“Policing is all team-based and I can’t accomplish
the job alone,” he said.
“You need everyone from the newest person hired all the way to senior administration to make this thing work. It’s a profession and a high-honored tradition and you need to make sure we’re all on the same page as to what we want to accomplish. It isn’t about us, it’s about the job we’re doing.”

same time as Fort Donnellson and Henry. This is when the western casualties began to overwhelm the Jefferson and St. Louis barracks and they began to send wounded soldiers north."

The Estes House was located at the corners of what is now South 5th and Main Street in Keokuk and was expanded into a hospital with 16 wards and housed as many as 1,600 wounded soldiers.

Battle of Athens

"The only battle that took place within any reasonable distance of Iowa or Keokuk was the Battle of Athens. The battle actually took place in Missouri just across the Des Moines River but artillery shells landed in Lee County so it is considered part of the battle site."

The battle of Athens itself was fought over a shipment of Springfield Rifles that were bound for Keokuk to be distributed to Union troops being sent to Davenport. The Confederates in Missouri intercepted intelligence pertaining to the rifles and fought to commandeer the bounty to distribute among Confederate sympathizers in Missouri. Three Union troops were killed in action while another eighteen were deemed missing in action. During this part of the presentation, Eckers spoke about the Breon Brothers of Keokuk, who were members of the famed 36th Iowa Infantry Company H known as the "Greybeards," as members of this unit were not allowed to enlist unless they were 40 years of age to 60. Hence, the moniker Greybeards. The two Breon brothers were both captured by the South and were shipped to Tyler Prisoner of War Camp in Texas where they died in Confederate custody about four weeks apart.

Samuel Curtis

"He actually had a very short military history as he resigned his commission two years after graduating from West Point in 1831….Eventually he was appointed Colonel of the 2nd Iowa and was promoted to Brigadier General in 1861."

Samuel Curtis had become mayor of Keokuk in 1856 before being reappointed shortly after the Civil War began in 1861.

General Samuel Curtis was tasked with "unionizing" locals and suppressing uprisings in Missouri. Eckers went on to explain that Curtis became very distraught with the fighting and the death that occurred by the summer of 1862 many of the West Point graduate commanders became distressed by the amount of their soldiers they had watched die.

Eckers displayed a poem that Curtis wrote that year after the Battle of Pea Ridge in which he laments the plight of so many men dying in vain.

"The scene is silent and sad. The vulture and the wolf now have the dominion, and the dead friends and foes sleep in the same lonely graves."

Ezekiel Sampson

"Not exactly a household name but Company F of the 5th Iowa was raised right here in Keokuk and he was the one that enlisted that unit." Sampson was not a native of Keokuk but he was tasked with raising the highly decorated 5th Iowa and he enlisted troops in Keokuk. Sampson was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel after enlisting himself as a private and eventually became a member of the Iowa Senate, a judge, and then of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Annie Turner Wittenmeyer

"Wittenmeyer is the first one ever named in an Iowa legislative document, any Iowa legislative document. She was appointed as a sanitary agent in the Iowa Sanitary Commission."

The Iowa Sanitary Commission was tasked with keeping soldiers safe not from enemy fire or artillery fire but from the horrors of war. The Commission sent out blankets, shoes, and sanitary items to Union troops.

UST Keokuk

"The USS Keokuk was launched in 1862 and arrived at the Siege of Charleston, South Carolina in 1863 where it was the only Union vessel that was sunk by the city's artillery batteries."

Eckers explained that while the ship itself has been lost to the annals of time after being sunk, one piece of the ship has survived.

Confederate troops boated out to the ship in low tide in the port of Charleston and removed one of the Columbia Artillery guns. The gun was then added to the barracks' artillery installation. As a result the turret gun from the USS Keokuk still remains in Charleston as a memento to the city's Civil War history.
