Hamelton takes on Rink for at-large seat

Rink looking for fourth term; Hamelton making first run

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON – Jerry Hamelton is a former law enforcement officer who moved back to Fort Madison about six years ago and is seeking his first public office in town.

Kevin Rink is a three-term incumbent councilman who said he was on the fence about running for office again. Rink, a 28-year resident of the city, also volunteers on the Elliott Test Kitchen Board of Directors and is a member of the Knights of Columbus.

“I was very much on the fence, but really the thing that pushed me more is that I had several citizens and city staff approach me to run,” Rink said.

“That really kind of set my tone and I would be the most tenured person on the council. I talked it over with my wife and she said, ‘What do you have to lose. It’s your seat to lose or your seat to win, no matter how you look at it.”

Rink said he wants to continue his work on the council including seeing the infrastructure improve and helping keep people informed of the local government’s role in their lives.

“I’d like to start a coffee with a councilman where once a month or so we bring in some donuts and coffee and give people a chance to talk with myself, another councilman and maybe the mayor,” Rink said.

“Just give them a chance to come in relaxed and talk with us about what’s going on with them.”

Rink said it would have to be less than three councilman to avoid having a quorum present, but he said it would be a good time to get more engagement with the public.

Hamelton said he made the decision to run when he read in a Pen City Current article, where councilman Chris Greenwald said he was elected to do what’s in the best interest of the city and not necessarily what the voters want.

“I found that shocking that an elected official said that he would know better than the people that voted for him, what is best for them. That comment pushed me to run for office. If they aren’t going to care what we think, then I am going to care what they think,” Hamelton said.

U.S. Service academy nominations open

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Congressman Dave Loebsack announced this week that his office is now accepting applications for nomination to the U.S. Service Academies. Each year, Congressmay nominate up to ten lowans for each of our nation’s four military service academies, with the final selection for admission made by the individual academy. Applications are due to Loebsack’s office no later than October 31st, 2019.

“As a military parent with children who attended the Naval Academy, this process is very personal to me,” said Loebsack. “I look forward to nominating our future leaders and encourage all interested students to apply.”

Our nation’s military service academies offer educational opportunities for young people interested in military service. Students can specialize in a variety of fields at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, or the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point.

Judge Brown also rules on Constitutional question

day.

As part of the hearing on Sept. 12, Brown received an audio recording of a Feb. 6, 2019 early morning interroga of McCain at the Lee County Jail, and body camera footage from the Lee County Sheriff’s deputy who accompanied McCain on the side of the road with vehicle trouble.

Deputy Joshua Wade discovered McCain near his vehicle along a highway in rural Lee County. Wade pulled up behind McCain's vehicle and upon calling in the stop, learned that McCain's vehicle matched one involved in a hit and run the same night. Shortly thereafter, Wade was informed that McCain may be the suspect in a stabbing also in Keokuk that night.

Wade took McCain into custody and he was transported to the Keokuk Police Department and was then moved to the Lee County Jail where questioning took place. Wade however, according to testimony asked McCain questions on the highway, but didn't inform McCain of his right to remain silent.

Lee County Attorney Ross Braden and 1st Asst. Jonathan Stensvaag stipulated at the hearing that the state wouldn't be using any evidence from the stop.

"Deputy Wade never did advise him of his Miranda warnings on the side of the road. But, to his credit, at that point it wasn’t an interrogation that related to the murder. But we did stipulate not to use anything McCain said to Deputy Wade that night," Braden said Wednesday.

"There was nothing inculpatory said at that time. All those statements came to investigators at the jail after Miranda warnings were given."

Berens told Brown at the Sept. 12 hearing, investigators knew that McCain was sleep deprived. McCain also testified at that hearing that he was in withdrawals from meth and had taken anti-anxiety meds and was stoned at the time of the interrogations.

Lestina testified at the hearing that McCain said he hadn’t had a drink for about three days and wasn’t on any drugs.

In her review of the audio recording, Brown wrote that the recording supports a finding that McCain waived his right to remain silent “knowingly and volnuntarily”.

"...this court finds that the defendant's initial request to remain silent was honored and that the second interview did not violate the defendants rights."
she wrote.

Braden said he wasn’t surprised by the ruling.

We think the legal authority that she cites and that Jonathan cited in our resistance was on point, " Braden said.

"We were confident in that night when investigators went to talk with him that everything was on the up and up and we were happy to see this ruling come out to reinforce that decision."

Beres also asked Brown to rule that all Miranda warnings be a defendant be done in writing and that in murder cases, a video recording be made of the waiver.
Brown wrote in the ruling that Beres presented no legal authority to support the argument.

"More importantly, this court cannot determine that such a broad requirement is appropriate or justified," she wrote.

"Law enforcement officers conduct interview in every imaginable physical set of circumstances. Some of those circumstances simply do not allow for a written document to be utilized to advise the defendant of his Miranda warnings or for a written waiver to be executed."

She also wrote videotaping the waivers is not a practical request.

"A blanket requirement that all waivers of Miranda warnings in murder cases be videoed is not practical…
This court declines to hold that the Iowa Constitution requires all waivers of Miranda warnings be executed through a written waiver and that such waivers in murder cases be videoed."

A pretrial conference has been set for Friday at 9 a.m. at the North Lee County Courthouse. The trial is set to start on Oct. 15 at 9 a.m. at the South Lee County Courthouse.

Candidates want to increase resident engagement

Hamelton said. Hamelton lived in Fort Madison until his father moved them to Arizona where he stayed and served as a deputy on the Maricopa County Sheriff’s Department. His brother became ill and Hamelton brought his family back to Fort Madison and went to work as Police Chief in Nauvoo. Then he returned to Arizona in 2002 and moved back to Fort Madison again in 2013.

“This is my home. I’m from here and this is where all my family is at. I loved my job and loved being a police officer, but anymore I’m old and can’t do what the young kids are doing.”

Hamelton also brought up engagement and said people need to be more engaged. “I don’t believe anyone engages too much in politics here and I believe it’s because they are so disenfranchised, they won’t even vote,” he said.

“I try to convey that message to people that if you’re not satisfied with the things we are doing, change it.”

Hamelton said he also ran because he feels the city has been irresponsible with spending in the past three to four years, wiping out a surplus the city had.

When commenting on how the city can get out of the financial pinch, he said public safety isn’t the place to cut. He also said franchise taxes are an unfair option because it taxes city residents for mismanagement on the part of city staff.

“The Police budget hasn’t increased $10,000 more than what we were paying three years ago, so I don’t understand how that’s a problem,” Hamelton said.

Hamelton said paying the sheriff to lead the city’s police department and paying a search firm $10,000 to find a new police chief was a misuse of funds.

“We wasted our money. We completely wasted city money on the sheriff’s office coming down here and staffing the police department when we had several officers here that coulda done it,” Hamelton said.

Rink said more diligence needs to be done on the franchise tax option and would like to hear more from people on both sides of the idea. “I’d like to see both sides of it. Mark (Lair) and I threw this out several years ago with Mid-American when we were originally talking about moving the fire department to five personnel per shift, instead of four,” Rink said. “It didn’t go over very well.”

Rink said he wouldn’t support cutting staff in the city to help find answers to the budget crunch.

“City spending has to be more intelligent that it is being handled now. There’s things we can do,” Rink said, as a councilman, he was appreciative of the sheriff’s help in handling the police department, but said that move did ruffle some feathers in the city.

To further help ease financial pressure, Hamelton even suggested selling the marina to a private developer to help the city generate revenue there while reducing expenses.

“The city doesn’t have the money nor manpower to keep it up. We could commercially sell it to somebody who’s willing to develop it and create a better environment down there,” he said.

Rink said more diligence needs to be done on the franchise tax option and would like to hear more from people on both sides of the idea. “I’d like to see both sides of it,” Hamelton said.

The way I look at that is we’re about to adopt an expensive kid that is we’re about to pay some money back in grants, but he said even that figure could be less than the amount the city would spend on the facility going forward. Hamelton said the other reason he decided to run is that areas of the city are being forgotten under current leadership.

“Residents need to know they are cared about if they live on Avenue I or M just like someone who lives on C or D,” Rink said. He said a breakdown of the city council shows that 5 or 6 of the seven current councilmen live on the north side of the city.

“When you go to the south and knock on those doors, people say they don’t vote and aren’t going to vote because the city never does anything for them and nothing ever happens down here,” Hamelton said.

“They never fix anything down here and they don’t care about us down here…” Those people have a point that they feel they’re being neglected and I believe they are.”

Rink also wants to see the city’s infrastructure continue to improve. He said the city is taking steps with streets and the Old Hwy. 61 project needs to get going.
